IPR Number: 2013-C-0077

Dear Ms. Braun:

You asked that IPR reconsider Assistant Program Manager Rachel Mortimer's decision to dismiss your complaint against Portland Police Bureau Sergeant Golliday, Officer Romanowski and Officer Vanderhoof. Since I had no previous involvement in your complaint investigation or the previous decision, your complaint was assigned to me for review.

I understand your complaint to be that they above-mentioned Bureau members were rude, unprofessional, wrote inadequate reports and did not communicate effectively.

I reviewed the entire file to determine whether there is a reasonable likelihood that further investigation would produce enough evidence to sustain a disciplinary action against the officer. In order to discipline any officer for misconduct, a formal administrative investigation must prove by a preponderance of the evidence that an officer violated a rule, a law, or a Police Bureau directive.

After reviewing the information you provided as well as information developed by the IPR investigator, I believe that the Precinct Referral is a more appropriate way to handle the case at this time due to the amount of time that has passed since the incident date. The Precinct Commander has been notified about your concerns regarding these officers.

Sincerely,

Anika Bent-Albert

THAT WAS BACK IN 2010 AND SHE RETURNED THE DOG WITH NO PROBLEMS. HE EXPLAINED THAT THEY NEVER RESIDED TOGETHER AND THAT DURING THE DURATION OF HIS OWNERSHIP OF THE DOG (SB) WAS NOT IN HIS LIFE WITH THE EXCEPTION OF THAT TIME IN 2010 WHEN SHE WATCHED THE DOG FOR HIM. THE DOG IN QUESTION IS A 12 YEAR OLD BRITNEY SPANIEL THAT IS MOSTLY WHITE WITH ORANGE SPOTS. IT IS BOTH OBEDIENCE TRAINED AND HUNTING TRAINED, AND IT A PURE BREED. (RP) SAID THAT THE VALUE OF THE DOG IS $2500.00 AND IT HAS A CHIP THROUGH "HOME AGAIN" AND IS REGISTERED ONLY TO HIM. THE DOG'S NAME IS "FRECKLES". HE SAID (SB) IS USING HIS DOG AS A POND TRYING TO FORCE HIM INTO A RELATIONSHIP WITH HER. SHE TOLD HIM THAT HE COULD HAVE HIS DOG BACK IF HE LET HER MOVE IN. (RP) SAID HE TOLD HER THAT SHE WAS NOT MOVING IN WITH HIM AND SHE SAID "THEN YOU CAN'T HAVE THE DOG BACK" HE SAID HE SAW (SB) IN THE WINDOW AT THE RESIDENCE AND WHEN HE GOT ON THE PHONE TO CALL 911 SHE CLOSED ALL THE BLINDS AND CURTAINS. A NEIGHBOR WHO WISHES TO REMAIN OUT OF THIS SAID THAT HE HAS SEEN THE DOG THERE AND IS WILLING TO CALL IF AND WHEN HE SEES HER WITH THE DOG. WITH THAT I GAVE (RP) MY BUSINESS CARD AND WROTE THE CASE NUMBER ON THE BACK. I WENT TO EAST PRECINCT TO START ON THE REPORT, AS I ARRIVED AT EAST I RECEIVED A CALL FROM THE NEIGHBOR. HE SAID HE SAW THE GUY RUNNING WITH THE DOG AND THE WOMAN IS CHASING HIM. I INFORMED DISPATCH, ASKED FOR COVER AND RETURNED TO THE ORIGINAL LOCATION, SGT GOLLIDAY AND OFCR MILLER RESPONDED. WE CONTACTED (RP) AND (SB) AT (RP) RENTAL CAR IN PARKING LOT AT SAYLERS BUFFET. (RP) WAS IN THE BACK SEAT OF THE CAR HOLDING ONTO THE DOG AND (SB) WAS STANDING BY THE FRONT DOOR BEING HYSTERICAL. WE SEPARATED THE TWO AND I SPOKE WITH (RP). HE SAID THAT AFTER WE LEFT HE TRIED TO CONTACT (SB) AGAIN, HE SAID THAT HE COULD HEAR HIS DOG INSIDE MOANING AND HE THOUGHT IT WAS IN DISTRESS. HE SAID THAT SINCE HE HAD IN THE DOG DOOR IN THE BACK HE KNEW HE COULD FIT THROUGH IT. HE SAID HE WENT INSIDE THROUGH THE DOG DOOR AND HE LOCATED HIS DOG IN THE UNLOCKED BEDROOM BEING HELD BACK BY (SB). WHEN (SB) STOOD UP TO YELL AT HIM THE DOG DROPPED TO THE FLOOR, (RP) SCOOPED UP THE DOG AND RAN OUT THE HOUSE WITH (SB) CHASING HIM. (RP) SAID HE MADE IT TO HIS CAR AND GOT INTO THE BACK SEAT WHERE WE FOUND HIM. (SB) SAID THAT (RP) KICKED IN HER BEDROOM DOOR AND TOOK THE DOG, CLAIMING THAT THERE WERE DAMAGES. NO DAMAGES WERE FOUND. (RP) SAID THAT HE WAS WILLING TO GO AND HAVE THE CHIP READ TO PROVE OWNERSHIP. I LED HIM TO THE ANIMAL HOSPITAL AT SE STARK/SE 139TH AVE. THE NURSE USED THE CHIP READER AND READ THE CHIP INSIDE FRECKLES, THAT NUMBER IS 402E684042. SHE THEN CONTACTED HOME AGAIN AT 1-888-466-3242. THEY CONFIRMED THAT (RP) WAS THE SOLE OWNER ON FILE FOR "FRECKLES" THEY ALSO SAID THAT (RP) HAD REPORTED THE DOG LOST BACK IN OCTOBER OF THIS YEAR. (RP) SAID THAT WAS BECAUSE (SB) CONTACTED HIM OVERSEAS IN OCTOBER AND TOLD HIM THAT THE DOG WAS LOST AND THAT SHE COULD NOT FIND HIM. ANOTHER STAFF MEMBER AT THE ANIMAL HOSPITAL RECALLED A LADY BRING FRECKLES IN BACK IN OCTOBER OF THIS YEAR CLAIMING THAT SHE FOUND HIM. WHEN THEY TRIED TO READ HIS CHIP BACK THEN THE READER WAS DOWN, THE LADY WAS SUPPOSE TO RETURN AND NEVER DID. THE EMPLOYEE CAN NOT SAY FOR POSITIVE IF THAT WAS (SB). UP UNTIL TODAY WHEN (RP) SPOKE WITH (SB) HE THOUGHT HIS DOG WAS STILL LOST. I APPRISED SGT GOLLIDAY OF ALL THE FACTS AND TOLD (RP) THAT I WAS MAKING A REPORT AND THAT I WAS REFERING THIS REPORT TO THE DA'S OFFICE FOR REVIEW.

Women rise and march in Portland

By SARA HOTTMAN
THE OREGONIAN

About 300 marchers on Thursday joined the One Billion Rising world movement to protest violence against women, marching in downtown Portland carrying handmade signs that read "Fight like a girl," "I should not have to be afraid," and "Speak out for daughters, sisters, mothers, selves."

One Billion Rising is a call to action by V-Day, the campaign started by "Vagina Monologues" playwright Eve Ensler in 1998 to end violence against women. Worldwide, 1 in 3 women will be raped, beaten, sexually coerced, trafficked or otherwise abused in her lifetime, according to the United Nations Development Fund for Women.

For the 15th anniversary of the V-Day movement, the organization called for a global strike as an act of solidarity.

Portland organizers chose not to get a permit to march the streets as an act of civil disobedience.

"This is not to disrespect Portland police," said Gina Ronning, an organizer, before the crowd embarked on its downtown march. "Out of highest respect for the law, we must walk out into our community to stand against violence."

There was little confrontation during the Thursday afternoon march from Director Park to Women dance to "Break the Chain" in Director Park as part of the One Billion Rising rally and march Thursday afternoon in downtown Portland. Women did the same dance in demonstrations around the globe to raise awareness about violence against women.

Pioneer Courthouse Square to First Unitarian Church of Portland, where there was food and activities.

Two clashes between cars and marchers occurred in the gathering's second hour, at and near the church. Portland police Sgt. Craig Dobson said the relative peace was about what police expected. Five officers walked the sidewalks alongside the marchers, with six Portland parks rangers and several Tri-Met officers as backup.

"We're here to make this as un-protest as possible," said Ranger Alex Gastile. "Our job is to let them to do their thing and make sure it doesn't get out of hand."

Marchers started with a rally at Director Park, with a Native American drum circle and stories from women who had experienced violence from men.

"I'm not an object for you to select," Emily Miller, 20, said during a spoken word performance. "I'm sick of men telling me what it's all about. ... Stand up and fight."

Miller wrote the verses three years ago, "after I was taken advantage of," she said. There's no written copy, she committed the words to memory.

Katie Braun, an east Portland resident, in December was beaten by an ex-boyfriend who broke into her house. She talked about the hurdles to getting police response to her assault.

"The officer came to my house and told me to rub out my bruises," Braun said. When she went to a police station, she said, they told her she had to leave or they would arrest her.

Beth Rakonca, 45, said she was marching to create a better world for her daughters, 12 and 14 years old.

Rakonca came to Oregon from Chicago 25 years ago after a boyfriend beat her up and broke her jaw. She took her son, 2 years old at the time, and ran.

"I felt lost, alone, like a victim," she said. "If I can empower one person, I will."

Portland's was one of hundreds of demonstrations around the world, according to organizers. The One Billion Rising website had video from marches in San Francisco, Chicago and New York, as well as Brazil, India, Israel, Africa, Taiwan and other countries.

OFFICERS, NOT GENTLEMEN Four Portland cops who worry

Four Portland cops who worry us.

by Nick Budnick Willamette Week

The latest research from Portland's citizen cop watchdog echoes the "few bad apples" adage, saying a few officers generate a large share of misconduct complaints against police.

Last week's Independent Police Review report doesn't name names, and because internal-affairs complaints aren't public, we don't know who these few cops are. But based on interviews with more than two dozen officers, citizens and defense lawyers, as well as a foot-high stack of legal and criminal investigative documents, what follows are four cops we'd be concerned about if we were Chief Derrick Foxworth.

The never-before-public details of the probes and allegations against these officers illustrate another point the city report makes: It's hard to prove police misconduct-which could explain why these cops are still on the force of nearly 1,000 officers.....

David Golliday: Golliday's drunken actions at a bawdy Halloween party attended by off-duty cops and prosecutors sparked a yearlong investigation in 2001. Another cop's fiancée told investigators Golliday grabbed her breasts and reached under her skirt, and later sent cops to her home to pressure her not to complain. He was accused of grabbing at other women, too, as well as swearing at a female district attorney. Police reports also show an unusual level of smack-talk: One cop said, "Golliday was bragging about how he had killed a man with his bare hands in Detroit."

Golliday was demoted from sergeant but not charged. And this was not the first time his mouth and hands caused problems. One evening in 1994, two years after coming to Portland from the Pontiac, Ill., police department outside Chicago, Golliday responded to a family disturbance at a Northeast Portland house. When he asked the 22-year-old son, Christopher Dean, to come down from the porch and talk, Dean replied "Fuck you." Golliday and a partner dragged Dean off the porch and arrested him forcefully with mace. Golliday wrote in his report, "None of this would have happened if he had talked to us with some respect."

Accused of resisting arrest, Dean beat the charge, claiming Golliday took him to a dark, deserted corner of Lloyd Center's parking garage to rough him up before taking him to jail. In court, Golliday said he took Dean to the garage merely to search him. Golliday denied Dean's claim that the cop said, "That's how we take care of things in Chicago," and that he was forced to leave his previous job because he "kicked too many little motherfuckers' assholes like you."

Golliday did not return calls. But Golliday's former boss, retired Pontiac Chief Don Schlosser, confirmed to WW that concern among fellow cops led to Golliday's departure. Said Schlosser, "His methods were not something we wanted to perpetuate in our community."

Portland's police chief said Wednesday that he didn't consider complaints by women employees that a captain was inappropriately touching them to be "sexual in nature." So he initially had no problem demoting Todd Wyatt to lieutenant and moving him from leading the Records Division to a role supervising sex assault investigators in the Detective Division, Chief Mike Reese said.

Continuing coverage of Todd Wyatt, a Portland Police Bureau captain demoted to lieutenant.

In his first public comments about the controversy beyond a prepared statement, Reese described Wyatt's touching as "inappropriate contact in a meeting. The women never complained it was a sexual encounter." "I just felt he didn't understand his responsibility to create an appropriate environment for his
