Andrew operates just down the road in Eugene and is one of the few researchers I know that walks-the-walk, working for a coalition building and operating these tiny home villages for the disadvantaged. When I heard him speak last year he was well on his way to building his own small home in the next tiny home village (also in Eugene).

P.S. The book also could provide a solid background on the other end of the housing/economic spectrum - dealing with homelessness, and the basics economic underpinnings of placemaking.
