Sleepless in Portland

My name is Marion McNamara, and I'm here because Ken Burfeind asked to address the council about the disruptive noise on the corner of Broadway and Market. Ken was unable to come, due to a change in his schedule. I live the down the hall from Ken and Gilda, and I know from them what a difficult time they've had with the noise from the people who spend the night on the corner. There's a gathering every night except when it's very cold, with shouting, drumming, fighting, and the howling of one person's dog answering the sirens of the emergency vehicles. Ken frequently calls the Noise Officer, but when this works it's only till the officer leaves, and just engenders anger and resentment from the group. This negative cycle is good for no one. The issue of noise is the most difficult and the one we are least able to mitigate on our own. Clean & Safe help us with the litter and needle issues, but no one seems to be able to help with the noise, which is most harmful to quality of life. Please consider some ways by which we can ensure that the unhoused people who live in the neighborhood are not harassed and neither are residents who are trying to sleep through the night. Is there a community policing option available? Could the people on the corner underneath windows where people are trying to sleep move to one of the three other corners, where there are no people trying to sleep? Is this a situation that would lend itself to mediation? How can the city help us with problem-solving this problem? Thanks for your work on working for long-term solutions. I hope there are some short-term fixes that we can work on together.
