Good morning, my name is Cheryl Graves

Today I would like to talk about the present state of the City of Portland's homeless crisis.

Collectively we as a city and state, along with non-profits and philanthropist are not facing this crisis at its core. Why are so many people returning to the streets?

Self-esteem and Self-worth are the necessary elements in our souls, that gives us the want and desire to achieve, be proud and care for ourselves and family.

This book, this humanitarian business plan called YES! My Life Matters, The Homeless Cure can put a stop to homelessness, an end to homelessness.

You will find a complete outline of this plan to rehabilitate the homeless and what it will take to tackle the destructive pattern of life on the streets and in shelters. Best of all, this proposal will keep people off the streets forever.

Finally, a real solution to the cause and effects of the homeless issues

- by addressing human nature at its core,
- the need for belonging
- the need to be present and accountable,
- the need to experience accomplishments and the need for purpose.

There is no accomplishment in receiving handouts, in fact quite the opposite, it directly lowers self-esteem and ultimately self-respect.

Self-esteem is built on pride and being worthy. This plan, the YES! My Life Matters covers it all.

Depriving humans of meaningful tasks is a slow and steady death to one's quality of life. By building meaningful lives we can all share in the victory.

This rehabilitation plan for the unfortunate wanderers offers nothing for free. It offers;

- revised education
- on-the-job training
- hands-on working education programs
- apprenticeship programs
- and life and personal skills awareness.

By building a strong and loved family we can begin to love ourselves, be good neighbors and excel at our jobs. In a way we are returning to the days when life itself was our boot camp. A sensible, realistic, attainable and worthy plan. A plan worth investing in.

Only when we are respectful can we be respected!

Building programs on self-respect is smart! and stopping the enabling programs that only allow people to become dependent is again, smart.

This plan does not provide housing and food but provides the necessary foundations to grow and produce eco-friendly crops and proteins along with the necessary tools to build your own home and share workspace.

This project-based learning program will revitalize lives and set boundaries to literally rebuild this community. Read this book, it can change lives and change how our system can focus on raising the bar on education, caring for children at risk, the mentally ill and addicted along with family values.
