Composting Works! Garbage Rates Going Down

Thanks to your efforts to reduce waste and recycle and compost more, Portland residential customers will see a slight decrease on their monthly garbage bill, beginning July 1, 2013. Overall, rates are down about 1 percent.

Since changes to the curbside collection service went into effect in 2011, Portland residents have reduced garbage going to the landfill by 37 percent, while increasing composting and recycling. At the same time, garbage and recycling companies have reduced costs for collecting food scraps and yard debris and the cost for composting those materials remains less than landfill disposal. This rate decrease for residential customers comes even with garbage and recycling companies' investments in safer, less-polluting trucks and other increases in disposal costs.

New rates can be found by calling your garbage and recycling company or at www.portlandoregon.gov/bps/rates.

Summer is upon us! It's time for bountiful produce, gardening, backyard barbecues and picnics in the park. With bulky watermelon rinds, bones from barbecued meats, corn cobs and weeds from the garden, there's no better time to take advantage of curbside composting. Compost made from the citywide program is already showing up in our community gardens, demonstrating how our food scraps and plant waste can take on new life as a valuable resource.

What works for your household?

Almost 80 percent of Portland households are already composting their food scraps. If you want to ramp up or recommit to food scrap composting, here are some helpful tips:

1. Keep your kitchen container in a convenient location.
2. Collect food scraps when preparing meals, scraping plates and cleaning out the fridge. Trimmings from house plants can also be added.
3. Empty food scraps (and liner, if you use one) into your green composting roll cart frequently and set it out for weekly pick-up.

Find the right container

There are a variety of creative kitchen compost containers to fit your space and style. You may even be able to use something you already have around the house. Here are a few ideas:

- For a smaller household, an empty quart-size yogurt container works well for collecting food scraps and cleans up easily in the dishwasher.
- A bucket with a lid can work well for a larger family. Make some room for it under the kitchen sink or store it next to the garbage can.
- Looking for something stylish that you can keep on your kitchen counter? Options abound in the housewares department of many local stores.

Keep it clean

Empty and wash your kitchen container frequently to keep odors and fruit flies at bay. Approved compostable bags can be used as liners and are available at most grocery stores. A list of approved bags and how-to videos on lining your container with thriftier options, such as brown paper bags or newspaper can be found at www.portlandoregon.gov/bps/carts.

Whether you choose to purchase them or make your own, liners help in keeping your kitchen container and green roll cart clean.

Save the space in your garbage container for garbage and turn your food scraps and plant waste into something valuable!

How to read your garbage schedule

Garbage in the city of Portland is collected every-other-week for most customers and every-four-weeks for some customers.

Recycling and composting are collected every week.

	JULY 2013
	Su	M	Tu	W	Th	F	Sa
Every-other-week garbage		1	2	3	4	5	6
	7	8	9	10	11	12	13

	21	22	23	24	25	26	27
Every-other-week garbage	28	29	30	31

Call your garbage and recycling company or look online if you do not know which day of the week your carts are collected.

Property owners are responsible for setting up and paying for service for their renters. Talk to your landlord about service changes or if you need to set out bulky items or extra garbage.

RIGHT SIZE YOUR GARBAGE CONTAINER

Recycling Plastic: What goes in and what stays out?

Items come in plastic packaging of every shape, size and color. It can be confusing to know how to dispose of it when you are done.

Residents can recycle many plastic items (along with paper and metal) in the blue Portland Recycles! roll cart. But not all plastic items belong in the blue recycling roll cart and there's a reason for that.

Recyclable materials are turned into new products, such as bottles, insulation and carpet. The approved materials collected from residents in curbside recycling were chosen because there is a stronger, more consistent demand for them, even when the market changes.

Sorting out unapproved materials at the recycling facilities costs money and reduces their market value. Some materials can also shut down machinery and create a safety hazard for workers.

Help make it easy to turn your recycled materials into something new by placing only approved materials in the blue recycling roll cart.

Even better, consider reducing disposable packaging by choosing reusable containers instead of one-time-use packaging, buying in bulk or borrowing a needed item from a friend.

PORTLAND COMPOSTS!

INCLUDE THE FOOD

Your food scraps at work.

The Errol Heights Community Garden, in the Brentwood-Darlington neighborhood, is just one of the 33 citywide community gardens that received donated compost from Nature's Needs this spring through a partnership with the Friends of Portland Community Gardens.

Erica Maggi and her daughter Sophia, age 6, spent time at the Errol Heights Community Garden work party this spring to kick off the gardening season.

The mother and daughter team helped with pathway maintenance in the common areas, pulled weeds, shoveled wood chips and compost, and prepared their own garden plot for the growing season.

Erica got involved with the community garden when it was opened last year. With a small yard, having a plot in the garden made sense to get her daughters involved in growing their own food. Sophia said she was most excited to plant garlic!

The seeds Erica has sown at her community garden plot have spread changes throughout her family's home life. "My husband and I cook almost all of our meals at home, and try to use fresh ingredients from our garden. We use our kitchen pail on a daily basis to collect food scraps from both preparing meals and after our meals. I sometimes empty it three times a day." She cleans her green roll cart with vinegar and baking soda to help maintain it and to keep odors down, especially in the summer months.

The city's residential curbside collection food scraps are processed into nutrient-rich compost. In an effort to "close the loop," this compost is being tilled back into our community gardens to grow healthy and nutritious food.

Find out where you can purchase compost at www.portlandoregon.gov/bps/carts.

What we eat and where it comes from makes a big difference for our personal health as well as the health of our economy and environment. Eating healthy food that takes fewer resources to produce and puts more money back into our local economy supports our community on many levels.

OMSI's interactive website shares personal stories about the challenges and benefits of making community-minded choices.

One of those stories is from Jennifer, a single mother on a tight budget who was looking for a way to provide her family with healthy, local food. When Zenger Farm began a Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) program with food stamp dollars, she jumped at the chance to be involved. CSA participants pay a set price for a weekly box of produce directly from a local farm.
