RESOURCEFUL COMMUNITY THREADS

PORTLANDERS SHARE STORIES OF REDUCING WASTE & MAKING CONNECTIONS

REPAIR

"It touches my heart when people bring in sentimental items handed down in their families," said Marie. "Like the woman who recently brought in a quilt made by her mother. While I sewed a new rip, she shared stories that brought back fond memories of my own mother."

Marie loves sewing and is delighted to be a volunteer sewer with Repair PDX, where she helps people continue using items they cherish, like a favorite purse or pair of jeans.

Repair PDX provides free repair services to community members who bring in items they might otherwise throw away. From small appliances, to bike maintenance and mending services, Repair PDX not only offers participants a chance to fix things, it creates a space for connection and community.

BORROW

"The Northeast Portland Tool Library is a great community resource," said Robert. "It empowers people to complete dream projects and save money by not having to buy tools for one-time use, like a table saw. Thanks to the tool library, people improve their surroundings while reducing the resources necessary to do it."

SHARING
NEIGHBORHOODS
EVEN BETTER

When Robert learned that two friends were opening a tool-lending library in Northeast Portland, he liked the idea so much he became a volunteer on the spot. Robert is passionate about fixing broken things. He enjoys helping people find the right tools for a job and hearing stories about projects the tool library helped make possible.

— your go-to for community resources —

There are four tool libraries around the greater Portland area that help people make home repairs and complete creative projects.

SWAP

Shay said, "At a swap, I find things I need and pass along things that might otherwise be tossed out. Plus, there's no chance of my stuff getting ruined by the rain in a 'free box' on the curb." Shay has participated in and volunteered for dozens of clothing and "stuff" swaps. She loves the culture of giving at community swaps.

Swap Positive has been hosting community swaps for 11 years in Portland. Swaps bring together volunteer coordinators, donated venues and swappers who bring clean items in good condition to share, at no cost. Items remaining at the end of a swap are donated.

Your stuff matters! Including stuff you no longer want or need

Do you want to get rid of items that still have a little bounce left in their cushions? Good news! Portlanders are finding creative ways to get gently used items to people who want them. Plenty of free online tools and resources will help you find a new home for practically anything you want to toss.

Check out www.portlandoregon.gov/bps/curbsider for easy ways to donate to neighbors and organizations.

- ★ Please don't leave items on the curb. They can get soaked by rain or damaged and quickly become trash.
- ★ Unusable bulky items such as appliances, furniture, large branches or stumps can be picked up for an extra charge. Contact your garbage and recycling company a week in advance for a cost estimate. www.garbageadayreminders.com

★ For discarded items abandoned in your neighborhood contact Metro's Regional Illegal Dumping (RID) Patrol at 503-234-3000. RID investigates and cleans up illegal dumps on public property, like curbs. They also offer tips, assistance and citations as appropriate. It's a BRIGHT TIME TO GO SOLAR

Homeowners can offset up to 80 percent of their initial investment in solar

More than 8,000 homeowners across Oregon have installed a solar electric system with cash incentives from Energy Trust of Oregon. The cost of solar electric equipment has steadily decreased over the last several years. And the federal government recently extended the Investment Tax Credit (ITC), which returns 30 percent of the cost to install the solar energy system. With this combination of Energy Trust incentives and state/federal tax credits, Portland homeowners can offset up to 80 percent of their initial investment in rooftop solar.

YOUR - EVERYDAY - ACTIONS MATTER

Since 1990, Portland cut carbon emissions by 21%, even while the population grew more than 30% and jobs increased more than 20% during the same period.

That's 40% less carbon pollution for every Portlander!

INCLUDE THE FOOD THE LIFE CYCLE OF YOUR FOOD SCRAPS

INCLUDE THE FOOD
Big or small, include all food scraps in the green Portland Composts! roll cart along with yard debris.

6 WEEKS TO NUTRIENT-RICH COMPOST
Residential food scraps travel from the curb to a local commercial compost facility where they are transformed into a nutrient-rich soil amendment.
THE AVERAGE HOUSEHOLD COMPOSTS 1,000 POUNDS EACH YEAR!

COMPOST HELPS GROW FOOD
Finished compost can be purchased for use in gardens, landscaping and agriculture.

THE FUTURE CENTRAL CITY

A great place to live, work and play

From Goose Hollow to the Central Eastside and the Lloyd District to South Waterfront, Portland's city center is the heart of the region.

Nearly 30 years ago, community members, city planners, business owners and builders came together to create a blueprint for the Central City. Their thoughtful work shaped iconic community spaces such as Pioneer Square, Waterfront Park and the Transit Mall, and later laid the groundwork for the Pearl District and the Eastbank Esplanade.

The City is updating this blueprint to prepare for the next generation of big ideas for Portland's city center. We need to plan for twice as much housing and 50 percent more jobs than we have today. As part of the 20-year Comprehensive Plan Update, the Central City 2035 Plan will result in more vibrant urban neighborhoods; expanded office, industrial and manufacturing spaces; walkable shopping districts; easier access to the Willamette River; and healthier ways to get around the Central City.

★ RATES ★
GOING DOWN

for garbage & recycling

Every year the City sets residential garbage and recycling collection rates based on a thorough evaluation of what it costs to provide these services to residents. This year, rates will decrease for Portland customers.

Portlanders are throwing away less garbage, and garbage and recycling companies are operating with increased efficiency.

Find new rates at www.portlandoregon.gov/bps/rates or call your garbage and recycling company.

Find your garbage and recycling company's name and phone number at www.garbagedayreminders.com.
