They Would Find Out a Lot More.
Woodburn World.
Why would it not be a good scheme to have the railway commissioners make their periodical inspections of the railroads of the state in the "lookout" of a freight train caboose? They might be a little longer about it, but they would probably find out a whole lot more than they do now, when they are whirled over the track in a special car with a nigger cook, and everything right up to style.
