I understand today the Portland City Council will consider a broad homelessness plan put forward by Mayor Wheeler and Commissioner Dan Ryan. I think it's great that finally there's a proposal, albeit loosely defined, to actually be able to move camps which are blocking sidewalks, disturbing residential areas, and near schools.

To be clear, I laud this effort hoping that it will move homeless and crime out of densely populated areas. So I want to be clear that for all the same reasons I am still TOTALLY opposed to destroying 70 neighborhoods with low barrier SRVs. That plan is still very much counterproductive in my mind.
