Elaborate Ceremony Held to Give Remembrance to Men Who Died in Service.

Seventeen years from that day when the body of David Campbell passed through long lanes of grief-stricken people of the city, a tribute in limestone and bronze was unveiled in the triangle at Nineteenth and Washington streets in memory of the life that he gave to the service of the city, and in memory of those other lives that were given by firemen in the call of duty that others might live.

City officials and citizens generally yesterday paid tribute to the memory of all of those heroic firemen who had sacrificed their lives at the call of duty. Headed by a police escort, a procession of city and county officials, chiefs from nearby cities, delegations of the Elks, the firemen of the off shift in uniform and the firemen's band marched from the fire headquarters at Fourth and Taylor streets to the cenotaph.

Mayor Pays Tribute.

The memorial is a gift to the city by friends of Chief Campbell, and particularly by one unidentified friend who gave the largest share of the cost of the memorial. Mayor Baker pointed out that Chief Campbell gave his life in the discharge of his duty in the effort to get his men out of the blazing furnace that was the building of the Union Oil company. He spoke of the grief that struck the city when the news of his death was known, and of the tribute of tears that was paid by thousands at his funeral.

No greater tribute has been paid by man nor can there be paid any greater tribute than that of thousands of tear-dimmed eyes the day Chief Campbell was laid to any man nor can there be paid any greater tribute than that of thousands of tear-dimmed eyes the day that Chief Campbell was laid to rest," said the mayor. "No man deserved it more." The mayor also paid a tribute to A. G. Long, who envisioned the memorial to his friend and who "also has passed into the great beyond."

Cenotaph Stands Alone.

Commissioner Bigelow recited the history of the effort to get the memorial of the plans to place bronze plates on the stone benches to bear the names of other firemen who gave their lives, and said this cenotaph probably is the only tribute of its kind in the country.

Dr. William Wallace Youngson spoke on "monuments" and said that David Campbell had made his name immortal by his investment in life.

"What will the world remember of me, of the things that I championed, of those things for which I lived?" he asked. "What I am doing to make the world better, to make my life immortal? So David Campbell lived, so David Campbell dared, and so he died that his name will be immortal and will be remembered wherever people remember the works of brave men. When a man comes to die, he is worth only that which he has given away and David Campbell gave his life."

Walter S. Long, president of the board of trustees of the David Campbell memorial fund, presided. The fire department band played, Rev. Oswald W. Taylor gave the invocation, community singing of America was led by Tommy Luke, Stanhope A. Piers, commission of finance, gave the salutation to the flag, Mme. Leah Laska sang "The Star-Spangled Banner," and the police quartet sang. The cenotaph was unveiled by Captain W. R. Kerrigan and Tom Gavin.

Chief Honors Predecessor.

Chief Grenfell recalled his service with Chief Campbell and told of the last fire alarm that Chief Campbell answered, and how, hours after the explosion, the body of the chief was found among the debris of the basement of the shattered building. "His life is an inspiration to the youth of today, an inspiration to them to die if necessary that others may live," said the chief.

Other firemen who gave their lives and who will be honored by the cenotaph, with the dates when they died, were:

- Fred Wagner, February 28, 1890; Tom O'Keefe, August 21, 1891; J. Houston, October 1, 1892; David Campbell, June 28, 1911; William Bigelow, June 4, 1912; A. G. Gustafson, March 16, 1916; F. H. Ward, June 1, 1923; C. A. Cook, May 26, 1926; W. J. McCreevy, May 1927.

H. A. Reynolds, president of the association, is presiding at the sessions. A feature of the morning session was an address by Dr. David E. Long on "The Board of Examiners and the State Association."

Mayor Baker welcomed the delegates at the afternoon session, with a response by President Reynolds. Dr. F. R. Margetts of Denver, president of the American Chiropractic association, was the chief speaker, his subject being "The Vision That Saves."

The program was followed by a series of group conferences, led by Drs. A. R. Gould, A. K. Fowler, J. I. Fischer, C. F. Easter, Harry R. Mannel and A. V. Downs.

Last Night's session was featured by a lecture by Dr. A. R. Gould of San Francisco on "The Doctor, His Patient and Food." The convention will continue until tomorrow afternoon.

OUSTER ORDER EXPLAINED

FLAX INDUSTRY DECLARED INJURED BY CRAWFORD.

Salem Officials Give Reasons for Removing Employee From City's Payroll.

SALEM, Or., June 28—(Special)—Demand on the part of certain Salem residents for an explanation as to why Robert Crawford, ex-state flax expert, was removed recently from the city payroll here, today brought the announcement that his discharge was due to correspondence with foreign flax agencies in which he said that Oregon's flax was processed by convict labor.

State officials said the letters written by Crawford were accepted with suspicion by the foreign flax agencies, and were returned by them to Henry Meyers, superintendent of the state penitentiary and executive manager of the state flax industry. The letters were said to have resulted in material injury to the flax industry in this state.

First intimation that something was wrong reached the prison a few days ago in the form of a letter rejecting a shipment of flax upholstery tow into British Columbia. The shipment was rejected, it was said, because Canada has a law prohibiting the importation into that country of any materials made or processed by prison labor.

Oregon officials later were advised
