Earlier today, Portland Bureau of Transportation (PBOT) Commissioner Jo Ann Hardesty, Portland Parks & Recreation Commissioner Carmen Rubio, and Mt. Scott-Arleta Neighborhood Association Chair Matchu Williams held a walking tour and press conference to discuss the results of the first 3 months of a multi-bureau, collaborative pilot project aiming to reduce gun violence and related vehicle speeding in the area. The current pilot evaluation ranges 3 months from October - December of 2021.

"Mt. Scott-Arleta is a diversifying neighborhood including many households with young children that enjoy walking to Mt. Scott Community Center," said Mt. Scott-Arleta Neighborhood Association Chair Matchu Williams. "The sudden rise in gunfire and reckless driving last year shook the community and spurred on calls for safe streets where neighbors can gather together. The pilot project gives us hope for future investments into safe streets in Mt. Scott-Arleta and citywide."

Working with neighbors to implement their idea, the Portland Bureau of Transportation installed a total of 18 temporary, low-cost traffic barrels within a 6x6 block radius where the combination of gun violence and related speeding were most prominent.

"My office got involved in this neighborhood after a group of community members reached out to my office with an idea in response to the rapid uptick in violence in the area," said Commissioner Hardesty. "Neighbors were observing high-speed traffic from gun violence incidents in the area, further endangering community members beyond shots fired to threats of traffic violence as vehicles sped through slip lanes and nearby residential streets. I directed my staff and PBOT to collaborate with the local community as well as bureaus across the city to pilot a holistic violence mitigation effort."

Commissioner Hardesty's office and PBOT were not alone, as the intervention became a collaborative effort involving PBOT, Parks & Recreation, OMF Division of Community Safety, Portland Police Bureau, and local community residents.

"To put an end to this rise in gun violence, we will need a combination of short-term mitigation and long-term solutions that address the root causes of violence. We need an all-hands-on deck, holistic response." said Commissioner Hardesty.

Summarizing the work between October - December of 2021

PBOT placed 18 traffic calming barrels as requested by neighbors

Parks & Recreation increased Park Ranger patrol and repaired lighting in Mt. Scott Park

Portland Police Bureau increased patrols to area, enhanced collaboration with Park Rangers

Commissioner Hardesty's office surveyed residents in area to capture their concerns and ideas

City staff spoke with local businesses, encouraged installation of security cameras

Built upon partnership with Multnomah County Youth Violence Prevention Office

The Results

64% decrease in verified shootings during first 3 months of pilot project following intervention that began in October of 2021, compared to the 3 months prior to pilot project intervention

Following the intervention, gun violence went down in the neighborhood compared to the city as a whole. This decrease occurred while rest of city shooting numbers remained consistent.

The Mt. Scott-Arleta neighborhood has seen a huge increase in shooting-related 911 calls (251% increase from 2019 to 2021). This is believed to be both due to the actual increase in shootings, but also because people are on heightened alert, leading to 911 calls reporting gun violence that are then investigated and determined to be a firework or another loud noise

72% of those responding to our survey were seeking solutions other than traditional enforcement, such as youth violence prevention outreach and creating an active, positive community space

Twice as many survey respondents believed the traffic intervention reduced traffic from people escaping a shooting compared to those that didn't perceive a difference.

"A wise elected leader who I greatly respect used to say that everyone has a role in creating a safe and thriving community," said Commissioner Rubio. "The Mt. Scott community and SE Uplift have done a great service to the broader Portland community, and I'm grateful for their advocacy. As Portland Parks and Recreation Commissioner, I'm open to hearing from other parks-adjacent neighborhoods interested in similar pilot projects."

"The Portland Police Bureau was happy to partner with Portland Parks & Recreation by having officers walk in Mt. Scott Park with rangers," said Deputy Chief of Police Mike Frome. "Efforts like this demonstrate how the City of Portland can address problems like gun violence in a holistic manner, rather than treating it as a purely police issue. In the months ahead, the Police Bureau looks forward to continued partnerships with Parks & Recreation, the Bureau of Transportation, and any other City Bureau that has innovative ideas on how to improve community safety. In addition to the work within Mt. Scott Park, the Portland Police Bureau conducted five focused missions in the Mt. Scott-Arleta Neighborhood area between November 2021 and January 2022 resulting in sixty-three custodies and the seizure of three firearms."

"This community driven approach with bureaus working collectively together to support them is an excellent framework for the future as we work to solve safety issues across Portland," said Community Safety Transition Director Mike Myers.

"Continuing this pilot project will allow the team to properly evaluate the program's effectiveness over the next several months."

"To be clear, this is a short evaluation period and volatile data set that we will need to continue evaluating and adapting to what it teaches us. We have not implemented this pilot for long enough to determine this a success, but the early results are promising." said Commissioner Hardesty. "I know people are scared. The amount of gun violence we have witnessed last year and so far in 2022 is unacceptable. From the data I have seen and the conversations I have had, I want to continue this pilot in Mt. Scott and beyond. I look forward to working with my colleagues in the upcoming budget cycle to see just what that looks like moving forward."

Ken Hughs yes, Ted Wheeler really needs to address the issue and insist his police force act like members of this community and build trust with Portlanders instead of demonizing them and ignoring their 911 calls.

Alex Dodge about what, specifically?

Traffic barrels do nothing but litter the neighborhood, make it look like a continual construction zone, and kill home values. They do nothing to change speed or reduce access. People move them all the time. People continue to speed. Signage does not change habits...enforcement does. Rebuild the police force so that we can have traffic management patrols again!

As usual, Hardesty exaggerates and creates non existant success. Traffic barrels are worthless and create driving hazards, which is why they get moved to the side of the road. And what was the cost of thousands of barrels and useless road blocking? Stop wasting money on useless tactics and hire more police. Portland's police force is at 1995 levels and Hardesty was behind the dismantling of the Gun Violence Reduction Team. The shootings doubled the next month and haven't gone down since. Now they can't put the escaped geni back into the bottle and think traffic barrels help. Good grief. I voted for Hardesty but deeply regret it.

It was a great meeting, I appreciate everyone who put in so much work. Thank you Jo Ann for responding back in late summer, and for listening. Everyone has an opinion about what should be happening or shouldn't, but putting work into something, not knowing if the outcome will be ideal- that's something else entirely. Glad to have had a little part in this, and hope to carry the energy into my own neighborhood.

You have ignored the people of Portland and surrounding areas who have been impacted by the enormous increase in violence and have been demaning you bring back our Police force. During President Biden's State of the Union he said we need to fund the police not defund the police, just wondering will you listen to him? There is no reason we cannot have procedures in place that hire the right people to poice, train them correctly and if & when needed hold them accountably. There is no reseaon that Portland should have been allowed to deteriorate the way it has, how much worse does it have to get before you will do something that actually makes a difference? Community policing works, put it back in place and bring back our City.

Proud to see PDX leaders like Commissioner Jo Ann Hardesty & Commissioner Carmen Rubio at the front of this movement of city-based actions. What's happening in Texas impacts ALL of us and we all have a role to play in mitigating harm when #SCOTUS overturns Roe in June. We also owe National Institute for Reproductive Health a great deal of gratitude for having the vision of enlisting local leaders to lead new and bold ideas in their communities.

What are your thoughts?

In 2020, Multnomah County Office of Sustainability and the City of Portland Bureau of Emergency Management(link is external) commissioned a study of the Critical Energy Infrastructure Hub in Northwest Portland. The study is intended to characterize and quantify the anticipated damages from the CEI Hub in the event of the Cascadia Subduction Zone (CSZ) Earthquake.

The study findings reinforce the public concerns about the facilities in the hub.Critical Energy Infrastructure Hub Tank Farm

1) The study estimated that a CSZ earthquake would result in total potential releases from the materials stored in tanks at the CEI Hub range from 94.6 million to 193.7 million gallons. This is equivalent to the size of the spill at the BP Deepwater Horizon oil spill disaster in the Gulf of Mexico that was the country's largest oil spill to date.

2) The study found that of the tanks for which year-built data was available the average tank was built in 1954, well before modern seismic standards had been established.

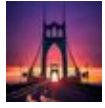

3) The monetized costs could range up to $2.6 billion and based on prior spills, total costs and damages would likely be many multiples of the monetized amount.

Oil releases from the tanks to the river would spread downstream all the way to the Mouth of the Columbia River.

My thought is that PBOT better get us at least one seismic-safe exit route over the cut. And of course require all tanks to upgrade to be seismic-safe.

I want to give appreciation to my friend and current Council colleague Commissioner Carmen Rubio as well as my former Council colleague Commissioner Amanda Fritz for their work to prioritize green space in East Portland during the last decade. My personal favorite is Gateway Discovery Park!

Under the current leadership of Commissioner Rubio, I know Portland Parks & Recreation will continue to focus on underserved communities

From Willamette Week: "Over the past decade, Portland has witnessed an extraordinary civic investment in parkland in its easternmost neighborhoods. Since 2013, the parks bureau has dedicated $84 million to parks east of 82nd Avenue. (Because Cully Park sits at Northeast 72nd Avenue, it isn't even included in that total.) The result is one of the most tangible achievements by City Hall in decades to make the city more equitable to low-income people of color, who disproportionately live at the eastern edge of Portland."

Yesterday, I joined three youth ambassadors for the Word is Bond PDX's "Dream Chasers Walk" in the Cully Neighborhood in Northeast Portland.

I learned new perspectives about the people, events, and places that have galvanized Cully over time, and I learned more about community members' aspirations for deeper investments in the neighborhood. I appreciated the brilliance the ambassadors offered our group, and I support their advocacy for additional funding in Cully, including schools, sidewalks, a health clinic, and an indoor community center and library.

I was thrilled to see regional representation on the tour, and I am so grateful to Commissioner Carmen Rubio, Commissioner Jessica Vega Pederson, Commissioner Susheela Jayapal, and Michelle DePass PPS Board of Education Zone 2 for your leadership, support, and sharing this experience with me on a sunny day.

I encourage you to spend some time on Word is Bond PDX's website to understand more about their community-based initiative, shop their online store, and donate if you can.

Together, we can support Cully's vision of a new tomorrow.

Parks Commissioner Carmen Rubiobio joined Portland Parks & Recreation (PP&R) Director Adena Long, PP&R staff, and members of the late Dick Fagan's family for a fun and tiny ribbon-cutting at the newly relocated Mill Ends Park today (Monday, February 7, 2022).

The substantial completion of the Portland Bureau of Transportation (PBOT) Better Naito Forever project has resulted in a new and improved world's smallest park, six inches west of the original site - complete with a cloverleaf-shaped park border, new vegetation, and new official park sign. Mill Ends became an official City of Portland park in 1976.

In an effort to keep to the quirky theme, a new tiny park bench, pitchfork, shovel, and cooking pot are also part of the Park. Also included is a tiny toy dinosaur, spurring Portland Park Rangers to look through City Code to see if the park had a designated dinosaur off-leash area (it doesn't). The Fagan family brought a replica, original park sign for the photo opportunity, as well as a miniature Ferris wheel which they said an actual crane originally put in place from the Hawthorne Bridge somewhere between 1948 and 1952. Dick Fagan was a columnist for the Oregon Journal, credited as the inspiration for Mill Ends Park after gazing out his office window at a hole meant for a streetlight that never materialized. PP&R was delighted to present his daughter Carolyn, son Bill, and daughter-in-law Diane Fagan with the honor of cutting the ribbon at the newly rededicated park.

They used a tiny pair of scissors.

This morning, the Permit Improvement Work Session was a significant and transformative milestone in the City's efforts to streamline processes, track and improve performance metrics and improve inter-bureau coordination. We are aligned around a common goal of improving permitting in Portland, and the discussion illuminated the critical role permitting plays in the City's economic recovery and development.

I commend my fellow council members Mayor Ted Wheeler, Commissioner Mingus Mapps, Commissioner Jo Ann Hardesty and Commissioner Carmen Rubio for unanimously agreeing that the status quo is unacceptable.

When I first started learning about the intricacies of the City's Permitting System, I was surprised to learn that most customers seeking a permit are not large commercial builders—instead, they are residential and small business owners. I was also surprised to learn that the largest share of permit seekers are residential alterations—followed by new residential construction and commercial alterations, which are often small to medium businesses repurposing or remodeling space for their business operations.

As a Council, we have a legacy opportunity to make meaningful, transformational change to ensure a safe built environment, and a timely and customer-focused process. The Permitting System impacts the City's housing shortage and our economic recovery effort—from the ability to grant permitting fee waivers for shelters to the $1.2 billion of pending projects currently in the permitting pipeline.

I heard enough today to know that we have some great feedback to keep us moving. I am also clear that we will be coming back with more dialogue but, more importantly, some changes.

Our next steps include workgroups to move ahead with the City's regulatory and system design reform work, and we plan to return to Council for action this Spring. The Process Improvement work will continue to monitor monthly performance metrics, and there will be a formal report prepared for the City Auditor in March 2022.

Overall, it's clear that we are on the right track, and there is much work for our Permit Improvement Team in 2022. I look forward to working more deeply with Commissioner Mapps, the City Bureaus, Portlanders and Terri Theisen, our Permitting Improvement Strategy Manager, to refine the City's Permitting System.

I encourage residents to review the work session from today (linked below) and engage with us to improve this system. We need your input.

The greatest flaw in the commission form is that new commissioners are each like Columbus discovering the new world. They put down a flag and marvel at the new. Problem is the folks who were always there and knew nothing was new. I bet this post was written in just this form, with many of the same excited outcomes, almost ten years ago when I got to be in city hall. I am sure I sat in his office and heard Randy Leonard say much the same. The only transformation that will actually be transformative is changing a system where earnest amateurs run bureaus. But good luck and carry on.

We've been in court almost a decade. Don't pretend you don't know this will never end as long as #CityLawyers & Cheerleader Mayors/ PoliceCommissioners & Council Members who accepted Police Union $$$ continue to collude with our #RoguePoliceForce that you've been allowed to become one of the most powerful lobbies in local government. Are your ears burning Mingus Mapps? Ted Wheeler no more has his hands on the wheel of the police dept than he did on PERS as state treasurer, and you well know it, as does that extra disgraced mayor we pay for Sam Adams who lost his spine after he got caught fucking an underage intern. Go ahead & play his wingman with Dan Ryan. Your #BoysClub can count its days. All the secrets are out & flying around. Multnomah County District Attorney's Office

Starting from December 20th, the City and County began activation of its winter weather response, putting into preparation what had been months in the making. Some will ask what got done over the last 14 days...as it happens, a LOT!

The City and County coordinated with nearly 800 people to staff and/or volunteer to complete 1,587 shelter shifts at eight warming shelters located across Portland before, during and after the holidays.

At the shelters, 6,022 meals were served to up to 500 people a day who took refuge at the shelters as well as their pets.

The Joint Office of Homeless Services (operated by the City of Portland and Multnomah County) supported by community-based organizations and volunteers, was able to provide Portlanders in need with over 5,000 sleeping bags, 2,600 tents, 4,640 tarps, 5,939 blankets, 7,277 hand warmers, 5,698 gloves, pet supplies and more. These supplies were provided to the guests staying at the warming shelters as well as supplied to outreach teams who visited unhoused Portlanders.

211 staff arranged transport for over 240 people and around 30 of their pets with help from service providers, cab companies, ride share companies and emergency group support staff. This allowed for people a safe ride to a warming shelter or motel.

We also want to thank YOU. Many local organizations and businesses modified services and hours of operation to keep employees and patrons safe from the cold. And many community members donated to these efforts, helping to ensure fellow Portlanders were better equipped to weather the storm.

Last but not least, we want to acknowledge and appreciate the juggling act of supporting winter weather in the midst of an ongoing pandemic. Thank you to all the guests, staff and volunteers for following COVID-19 safety protocols.

The ELEVEN "Resiliency Series" events in 2021 hosted for Technology Association of Oregon community members offered the opportunity to hear directly from key community stakeholders about issues related to the resiliency of our region.

From elected officials such as Commissioner Carmen Rubio, Oregon Secretary of State Shemia Fagan to industry innovators like Oros CEO Michael Markesbery and the head of Portland General Electric's Project Zero, Kimberly Howard, these conversations touched upon initiatives that impact the local tech community.

The ELEVEN “Resiliency Series” events in 2021 hosted for Technology Association of Oregon community members offered the opportunity to hear directly from key community stakeholders about issues related to the resiliency of our region. From elected officials such as Commissioner Carmen Rubio, Oregon Secretary of State Shemia Fagan to industry innovators like Oros CEO Michael Markesbery and the head of Portland General Electric’s Project Zero, Kimberly Howard, these conversations touched upon initiatives that impact the local tech community.

This is how dysfunctional PortlandORGov is. I have reported this car many times. It is blocking the sidewalk and has been there for years. It is so bad that moss is slowly tearing up the sidewalk. The disabled lady who lives down the block has to go the long ways around cause the moss is too slippery for her to walk on safely.

And nothing is done. Portland can't seem to take care of basic day to day stuff and now can only put out fires (caused by rioters). The quality of life is going downhill.

Commissioner Mingus Mapps, Commissioner Jo Ann Hardesty, Ted Wheeler, Commissioner Carmen Rubio, Commissioner Dan Ryan can't seem to remove a single car.

I guess they have other issues that are more important like the shootings, robberies, violent assaults, and have put the parking and zoning folks on that issue so this car gets a pass.

Just another example of how Portland is no longer livable.

I live in SE Portland. In the last year or so we have had several businesses close. They are closing because of crime, shoplifting, robberies and so on. Even the local insurance guy had to kill a violent homeless guy who was threatening him and his staff. This is what Portland has become.

We have had several homicides and it seems like we are having regularly scheduled shootings. Just the other night there was a chase of a guy how stole a car. He ditched the car on our street and then hide from the police. After they left he came out of hiding and continued to run down the street. Of course he was carrying a gun which is not surprising. I called police to see if they wanted excellent images of the guy running down the street. I was told they would contact me. So far no contact, so I guess they aren't interested.

We had a Fred Meyers close due to shoplifting. Lately we had a Shell station close because of shoplifting and armed robberies. Then the Seven-11 down the street closed for the same reason. Of course the homeless are trying to take over those properties and they have have armed security to patrol the areas 24/7.

As most folks know we have a very ineffective do nothing city council that can be counted on to do, NOTHING!!!!

Now Portland has a reputation of out of control riots (true), garbage everywhere (true), abandoned cars that have been on the streets for so long there is grass growing around them (true), homeless people everywhere (true) and few if any applicants for the understaffed police departments (true). If a cop is hired in Portland they wait till they have been through the FTO program and then start applying for other jobs in departments where police are respected instead of being a focus of hate.

We have a worthless and ineffective city council, Commissioner Dan Ryan, Commissioner Mingus Mapps, Commissioner Carmen Rubio, Ted Wheeler, and of course the leader of the losers Commissioner Jo Ann Hardesty who can't manage her own finances and has a history of being sued because she can't seem to live within her $123,000 annual salary. Now she is suing Portland cause she probably needs more money.

It will take decades to turn Portland around and that is if they started today. But we all know they won't do anything about it except talk. Fixing it will never happen in most of our lifetimes.

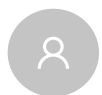

So who is responsible for all this crap? You are, citizens/voters in the City of Portland. You voted for the current group of losers and we are getting just what we deserve. So live with it cause this is the life you ordered.

Until then get security cameras, arm yourself, put up tall fences to protect your property, don't own new things cause they will be stolen or trashed. And most of all lower your expectations when it comes to our so called worthless leaders. Having low expectations will prevent you from being disappointed.

WIN for Historic Preservation in Portland

At today's Portland City Council hearing, the potential amendments to the Historic Resources Code Project (HRCP) were heard and voted on. Amendment 3 passed unanimously - a major victory for Portland. This amendment removes the stand alone criterion of "loss of all reasonable economic use" and creates a set of comprehensive criteria including "the association with historically marginalized individuals or communities" as well as "the economic consequences for the owner AND the community."

This necessary change was a direct result from this past summer's use of the stand alone criterion used to secure approval to demolish the historic Yamaguchi Hotel (Old Blanchet House) in the New Chinatown/Japantown Historic District.

Thank you Commissioner Carmen Rubio for your leadership to introduce this amendment. And to the City Council for voting in support. This effort was led by our partners at the @jamopdx (Japanese American Museum of Oregon) and a coalition of cultural organizations. The collaboration and teamwork with the Advocacy Committee from the @visitahc (Architectural Heritage Center/Bosco Milligan Foundation) was essential. It takes a village, in addition, Restore Oregon's Policy and Advocacy Committee and board of directors, organizations and individuals all across the City understood the value and provided support.

More news about the final steps in the HRCP adoption process to come.

I got out today for a Fur Free Friday protest in Portland a big thank you to Compassionate PDX for all their work on this issue.

I hope that Portland City Government Ted Wheeler Commissioner Jo Ann Hardesty Commissioner Carmen Rubio Commissioner Mingus Mapps Commissioner Dan Ryan will finally pass the Fur Free PDX ordinance and end the sale of new fur in Portland.

Banning fur is the right thing to do for the environment. Millions of wild animals are still violently trapped in the wild. This is happening at a time when we need to be protecting wild animals, we're in an extinction crisis. As far as fur farming goes, it's horrific beyond words and a simple web search will reveal more than you ever want to see.

I was honored to meet with Portland's Creative Laureates Leila Haile and Joaquin Lopez last Friday! The community-centered compassionate, and healing approach they both bring to their work as artists is precisely what Portlanders need right now.

Joaquin, thank you for sharing about your work as a mental health counselor and how you infuse it into your creative process and artwork. I also want to highlight and appreciate your efforts to create spaces for intergenerational learning to bridge the gap between our elders and youth.

Leila, thank you for your advocacy for our youth and disability communities and your leadership in making art spaces in Portland more accessible. I am grateful for our conversation and the knowledge and perspective you shared about art being a part of violence prevention.

You both are incredibly talented, driven, and I am thrilled to support your work in these roles over the next two years.

I also want to thank my friend and colleague Commissioner Rubio for bringing Leila and Joaquin into this role. We all need more joy and light in our lives, and I am so proud to serve on a City Council that invests in the arts.

In PDX, we have 2 Mayors (for the price of 2), both disgraced. I wonder if either of them follow police news. Sure doesn't seem like it. Why would we want more of these #OathBreakers? Greetings and happy sunny (for now) Friday. Here are my top five things from the week:

1. On Monday, I attended an event for MusicPortland at Revolution Hall with Commissioner Carmen Rubio. I had the pleasure of listening and answering questions from Portland's vibrant music scene. I am committed to an economic recovery that enables our creative community to thrive.

<https://www.opb.org/article/2021/11/03/portland-mayor-ted-wheeler-proposal-police-funding-increase/>

2. On Wednesday, we heard A LOT of testimony on the Historic Resource Code Project. Thank you to everyone who testified. This project will determine who, how, and what will be considered historic districts and landmarks.

3. I spent a fair amount of my time explaining my goals and plans to the media this week. We are in challenging times, and I appreciate local media's willingness to give me time to explain my point of view.

4. This week, I spent a lot of time talking and deciding how to spend the 62 million additional dollars we have in the "Fall budget monitoring process." As I have said many times, Portland is at an inflection point, and we need to get this right. Here again, is the link to testify:

5. Today, I attended the Economic Recovery Task Force. This group has been meeting for the last month to focus on small businesses and equitable recovery from the economic damage of the pandemic. I am incredibly pleased about the focus on food carts and the entrepreneurial Portlanders that make this city great.

Hello Neighbors, check out the latest Friends of Frog Ferry newsletter. City council is in discussions of distributing/allocating a surplus of 62million this month. Both St Johns AND cathedral Park Neighborhood Associations are in support of this public transit opportunity. Is this worth a consideration? What are your thoughts?

"What's Next? Looking Around the Next Bend in the River:

The most-asked question we hear at Frog Ferry headquarters is, "what's next?" Although there is a lot of complexity behind the answer, the short answer is that we are truly at the crux of learning whether the ferry project will move ahead as a public transit service or whether we'll have to pivot to privatization."

Thanks to everyone who attended Portland Arbor Day 2021 at Lents Park this past weekend (Saturday, October 30, 2021).

We planted new trees to help combat climate change, we learned about the many, many benefits and services that trees provide to people and wildlife, introduced a lot of kids to some of our Portland Park Rangers, enjoyed arts and crafts and other family-friendly activities, and heard from Oregon State Representative Khanh Pham, House District 46, City Parks Commissioner Carmen Rubio, and PP&R Director Adena Long.

Sure, Arbor Day is done but you can celebrate trees all year long! Get involved at portland.gov/trees shared a photo

Check out today's Gun Violence in PDX town hall with Representative Lisa Reynolds, Multnomah County District Attorney's Office, Sheriff Mike Reese, Commissioner Carmen Rubio and Word is Bond PDX! We discussed root causes and important solutions that we can all help address in our city.

Thank you to our more than 80 guests who joined us, including other local leaders Lori Stegmann, Multnomah County Commissioner, District 4, Akasha for The People, and Sharon Meieran.

We will continue to host these gun violence town halls quarterly.

History may try to rewrite us. Don't let them.

#OccupyIsDead #LongLiveOccupy

It's our birthday month as our movement spread across the nation.

#AlwaysRemember

#AnotherWorldIsPossible

As you can see from this video by David Love, #Utopians are far more fun, witty, intelligent, creative, nonjudgmental & loving than those brutalizing and terrorizing us,

Be it last century's Bikers vs Hippies & KKKops vs Civil Rights; or this century's KKKops vs Occupy, KKKops vs BLM, KKKops teamed with Private Militias vs Antifa...

For one rare moment government might be on our side.

I'll pay more for sewer & garbage disposal to solve this problem. So what if it also benefits the housed?
We're the ones paying taxes!!!
I do NOT understand this Mayor's thought process AT ALL.
We pay for TWO of them, and we still get incompetency.

Their objections is that dumpsters will attract more houseless & the housed will dump their stuff there instead of paying at the dump. SO WHAT!!!!????!!!! Just collect your fees a different way and make life easier on the housed & unhoused. Isn't that YOUR JOB?!?

"...Lovell told OPB this case has been referred to internal affairs for investigation.

The hacked Oath Keepers data was sent to the transparency group Distributed Denial of Secrets, which provided the information to journalists and researchers. In several cases across the country, journalists and citizen sleuths have been able to confirm law enforcement and military members using the leaked data. New York City police officers and a detective in the Hudson County prosecutor's office were in the leaked data, prompting investigations from those two agencies.

The data include names, membership join dates and contact information for nearly 40,000 people across the country who at one point paid dues to the organization, including more than 1,000 names in Oregon and Southwest Washington. Except where people paid the approximately $1,000 for a lifetime membership, it's not clear from the data if people are still members.

...The Oath Keepers militia was founded by Army veteran and Yale Law School graduate Elmer Stewart Rhodes in 2009. The group recruits people with experience in law enforcement and the military to prepare for what the organization characterizes as an inevitable armed conflict with the U.S. government. The organization has been involved in or planned a number of criminal and violent actions over the past decade, according to University of Albany Assistant Professor Sam Jackson, who wrote a book on the Oath Keepers. 'It's really problematic if you have members of law enforcement saying, for example, that they're not going to comply with federal court orders because they think those federal court orders are unconstitutional,' Jackson said."

using the leaked data. New York City police officers and a detective in the Hudson County prosecutor's office were in the leaked data, prompting investigations from those two agencies. The data include names, membership join dates and contact information for nearly 40,000 people across the country who at one point paid dues to the organization, including more than 1,000 names in Oregon and Southwest Washington. Except where people paid the approximately $1,000 for a lifetime membership, it's not clear from the data if people are still members. ...The Oath Keepers militia was founded by Army veteran and Yale Law School graduate Elmer Stewart Rhodes in 2009. The group recruits people with experience in law enforcement and the military to prepare for what the organization characterizes as an inevitable armed conflict with the U.S. government. The organization has been involved in or planned a number of criminal and violent actions over the past decade, according to University of Albany Assistant Professor Sam Jackson, who wrote a book on the Oath Keepers. 'It's really problematic if you have members of law enforcement saying, for example, that they're not going to comply with federal court orders because they think those federal court orders are unconstitutional,' Jackson said."
