Sunday is Transgender Day of Visibility, and last week I was proud to support a City Council proclamation alongside LGBTQ+ community leaders. Trans rights ARE human rights – and we have a moral obligation to protect trans kids so that they can enjoy full, visible lives. As elected officials, we have a duty and responsibility to call out and address transphobia, homophobia, xenophobia, anti-Blackness, and other violent negativity – because we all know that they share the same ugly root of white supremacy, colonialism, and patriarchy. And our responsibility goes beyond proclamations: It is crucial for the City to keep exploring how we can best support our transgender communities and to unapologetically work toward being an equality-forward, welcoming destination. We must ensure an environment where the strength, joy, and love that also comes from the trans community translates into equal treatment for housing, workforce, education, public safety, and health care. #TDoV

@commrubio 🛑 stop with the housing!!!
That is not the problem. You cannot give an addict and home and think it will solve the problem. We need TREATMENT for the majority of the homeless.

Today I was pleased to present a Woman of Influence Award to Stefanie Kondor, an affordable housing champion who is dedicated to building safe communities for families in need. With Related Northwest, she has been involved in developing 10 community projects, providing homes for at least 1,100 families. She was previously with Central City Concern, where she helped develop the Blackburn Center. Stefanie has also stepped up and volunteered her time to serve as an advisor to the Portland Housing Bureau, as both a member of its Housing Advisory Commission and as a member of a project workgroup that recently dove into our complex Inclusionary Housing policies. I am deeply grateful to Stefanie for serving in these ways - and the City is better off because of it. Away from work, she uses her influence at youth-focused nonprofits, including Boys & Girls Club and Women in STEM. Congratulations, Stefanie!

Today Portland City Council unanimously approved an ordinance I introduced to phase out gas-powered leaf blowers to improve public health and quality of life for residents and landscape workers. Gas leaf blowers emit toxic pollutants, particulate matter, and noise that creates negative health impacts for people nearby. This policy is the culmination of many years of hard work and advocacy to make Portland a healthier and cleaner place to live. I want to thank the Bureau of Planning and Sustainability, our county partners, and Quiet Clean PDX for helping to craft a proposal that benefits public health and our environment, while being mindful of specific challenges for people who rely on this equipment. I also want to recognize the late Commissioner Nick Fish, who was an early advocate and would be so proud to see this policy moving forward. For details please go to portland.gov/rubio/news.

223 Equitable Gas Leaf Blower Phase-out Ordinance Gas powered leaf blowers are no louder than electric leaf blowers and at $160-300 for a leaf blower battery not including the blower itself. I'm guessing you're not compensating for the cost of that nor our current $450-550 investment in quality leaf blowers. The word; "Equitable" in your ordinance name makes no sense from my standpoint. This is just another Portland law driven by those who know nothing about modern two stroke engines. ***Current leaf blower two stroke leaf blowers come with catalytic converter option just as cars do to cut the pollution issue. Your leaf blower ban is based on extremely outdated information. (as always) As for the fall leaf blowing option; we have pine needles dropping here year round. Have you ever tried to rake up pine needles and their miniature pinecones? Two stroke leaf blowers have had solution free options available for over 20 years now. I'm guess the answer to everyone voting yes is a BIG no, that you don't have to clean up falling debree in your downtown condos and if you do, you rely on some else to do it. It seems the only people in support of banning leaf blowers are those who don't use or need them. Instead of coming out with a more specific ordinance that limits blowers to non-polluting; you threw the baby out with the bath water because it was too much work to look deeper into the mechanics off the issue as apposed to relying on blogs written by those who know nothing about engine technology. I'm a Democrat and a resident of west Portland who also cares about pollution and I am continuously dismayed at the decisions made based on ignorance in this city and I'm very disappointed in my candidate voting choice. It seems that you only vote for things that sound good without real knowledge or consideration of the actual facts.

Last night I joined the St. Johns Neighborhood Association to hear their concerns about a new BottleDrop location proposed by the Oregon Beverage Recycling Cooperative. This is the information I shared: My office first learned of this proposal exactly two weeks ago, and I share the concerns raised by community members. I am extremely disappointed that city officials were not given a heads-up, especially in light of active conversations regarding other redemption centers in Portland. The very next day, the city asked the state for the decision-making process to include community voices – and we learned that the application to the Oregon Liquor and Cannabis Commission includes a 30-day comment period. That’s important, because OLCC is the deciding authority here. In addition to expressing concerns with state leaders, I have directed my staff to begin conversations with the Oregon Beverage Recycling Cooperative about alternative locations in North Portland. The initial administrative decision related to the proposed site, known as a Land Use Compatibility Statement, is only a zoning check and isn’t coming anytime soon.

Ooo I've got the perfect location! 1025 SE Pine! @sohohouseportland is all about community, I'm sure they would welcome any new neighbors regardless of their class! 😊 Ooo or maybe right next to HILOS in Old Town where Oregon Lawmakers just approved a $2million "development project" to basically rehabilitate the infamous Broadway Expansion plan, but this time funneling tax payer dollars to known Israeli Defense Forces business ties. 😞😞😞 Oh...would those locations be a conflict of interest for you and your mayoral candidacy? 😞😞😞

Coming after the Pho Gabo closure, are we sure we want to keep letting irate NIMBYs dictate these things? Harming a small business because you chose to move next to a restaurant is an absurd overreach. Won't stopping this Bottle Drop location just push the Bottle center to someone else's neighborhood?

Recognizing, embracing, and building the continuum in response to what people truly need to be successful is what today is all about. In short, that continuum is: shelter, services, stability, and housing – and I am pleased to see increased city-county planning and coordination to get us there. This is why I took the time to learn from other cities; to see this continuum in action; and to help invest in the city's Temporary Alternative Shelter Sites. We can design a system to ensure that our houseless neighbors have the services, the trusted relationships, and the consistent communication they need as they move from the streets and toward stable, permanent housing. Our city needs systems and solutions to houselessness that will work for real people – that's why I take my role as the city's Housing Commissioner so seriously. It's why I've completed, led, and passed numerous policy changes to speed up housing production in the face of serious financial barriers that are not in the city's control. The homeless crisis is the most urgent issue facing our communities, and we need some serious radical acceptance of what it takes to see that people can be successful. And the only way to get there is through collaboration and effective implementation.

Portland may rewrite its daytime ban on homeless camping

Updated: Mar. 08, 2024, 6:23 a.m. | Published: Mar. 07, 2024, 3:07 p.m.

Yesterday the Oregon Supreme Court decided it would not weigh in on a Multnomah County judge's injunction on the City's camping ban. I could see this coming, which is why I warned that we needed to first ensure our timelines matched with adequate shelter sites and day center capacity, as well as a clear and defined shelter and housing strategy. Back then I said that to move the policy forward before all these pieces are ready to go does not make good or responsible policy sense to me. As you might remember, I introduced amendments to the ordinance, and ultimately voted no. As I stated then, and is worth repeating, I believe it is important to have a process that is inclusive of all the system partners - including shelters, law enforcement, experts, and others - to arrive at a solution that is inclusive and not divisive. It's why this past January I suggested to the Mayor, and then we discussed at a subsequent Council meeting, a recalibration that includes all active system partners. We need to find a new, balanced way forward that is humane, especially for our community members with disabilities.

I believe the biggest failure to solving this issue is that the programs are not in sync with policies. Thanks for calling this out and for representing humane and reasonable solutions.

We need systems reforms to align capacity and resources in order to move people off the streets into shelter and an appropriate continuum of care.

I applaud Multnomah County and am very much in support of all that they stated in this resolution. I will be speaking with my Portland City Council colleagues about how we best can share our collective thoughts with our congressional delegation so that they know exactly where we stand.

Divest from the Oregon Israel Business Alliance if you actually care about Palestinians. You, a Portland City Official, are giving tours of an IDF owned shoe factory gentrifying old town who is a member of the OIBA. I sat in front of you and told you to your face that this was coming and offered you an opportunity to prove your lack of complicity then and there and you sat silent, only to post a photo op with HILOS a day after this post.

Last week I had a great chat with Portland Tea Party, hosted by Ciara Pressler, about how the City is working to revitalize our Central City through programs like the Downtown Business Incentive Credit and through activation events led by Portland's creative community, which is bringing people together to make an economic impact, to forge vibrant community connections, and to make the city a better place. You can check out the interview at portlandteaparty.com/episodes. The talk show livestreams every Friday at 9am.

A Vietnamese Restaurant in Portland Has Closed Because a Neighbor Complained About the Smell

I am very concerned and am raising serious questions about the negative impacts of this policy. Upon learning about this issue, my office has met with the impacted business owner, and has since directed @bdsportland to put in place an immediate pause on odor complaints tied to food establishments, and launched an immediate evaluation of the relevant code to make recommendations on changes. Per our state zoning laws, those recommendations would then be evaluated by the Planning Commission, and then go to City Council for final approval. While the timing is dependent on several internal and external factors, including public comment, my goal is to see the code changes happen as soon as possible.

Yesterday Portland City Council proclaimed February to be Art and Black History Month. Special thanks to Kee's Loaded Kitchen for providing food for the reception! This month and every month, we must acknowledge the long-standing and disproportionate impacts that racist policies and systems have had on Black communities and individuals. And we need to recognize Black contributions in economic development, advocacy, education, and leadership - which significantly improve our quality of life and are necessary for our vitality and social health as a city. When Black families thrive, Portland thrives.

I don't need to tell Portlanders that the amount of graffiti throughout our city has increased exponentially over the past few years – they can see it with their own eyes. I am committed to addressing this problem, so last week I introduced and passed an emergency ordinance that will both expedite the removal of graffiti from private property, while cutting costs for the City. Today I spoke with KGW's Evan Watson about the Bureau of Planning and Sustainability's Graffiti Abatement Program, which has removed 500,000+ square feet of graffiti since October 2022. This code change isn't the only measure the City is taking to address graffiti – and it is only intended to be used in the most egregious cases. Graffiti is clearly a complex issue that requires a lot of coordinated work to address. We'll continue working to identify ways to further streamline our processes and to build out the program.

@indigohowever thanks. I just pulled up the site and in their drop down topics I don't see anything thing on graffiti and in their search function there are reports that mention graffiti but I can't find the one(s) that reference programs that successfully reduce graffiti. Can you point me to that one(s) specifically? Thanks.

@glack24 Lo mismo me estaba preguntando yo!!! Porque solo privado? Esta situación del graffiti no debería de ser para criminalizar lo ya criminalizado, Carmen tu más que nadie sabe que es buscar firmas, dar mejores oportunidades, dar herramientas a los distintos lugares de apoyo con jóvenes, pero también ya es tiempo de forzar más a los padres en enrolarse con sus hijos en aprender que ocupan. Dar apoyo a padres. Una vez te dije de una problemática en la escuela de Gresham Barlow y nunca hiciste nada. Así que como yo voy apoyar a alguien para un puesto que nunca me apoyo?

@indigohowever thanks for those but I wasn't looking for a large macro discussion on social services vs policing policies. I was looking for something specifically about graffiti since your comment was that there are ways to "invest in ways that are actually proven to reduce graffiti". I want to learn more about those. Can you please direct me to those? Thanks.

@glack24 sure, first stop could be youth.gov which uses sources as varied as DOJ, USDA and the Dept of Education to track juvenile crime, juvenile success and everything in between. Start with the early prevention pages which lay out a clear argument for social programs over policing.

@glack24 it's a lot less expensive than an increase in policing. The police dept requested an additional 4% increase over last year's budget to the tune of nearly $20 mil dollars more (putting them at about $243 million) and that doesn't account for county and state police.

Making private citizens pay to clean up the crimes of criminals just makes this city and county more expensive and less safe. What message does this send? Vandalize property and the victim has to pay for it? How is that the answer? Fund the police properly! Enforce laws on the books. Don't pat yourself on the back for enabling criminals to keep ruining Portland.

Carmen, we need to fund the Portland police bureau at appropriate levels in order to deter this behavior, in addition to downstream graffiti removal. Right now they only have one person in their department, and they need a team of undercover cops to infiltrate graffiti artists, using graffiti tracking software to identify their vandalism, and arrest them. This is the kind of systems approach that will reduce cost to the taxpayers while improving liability.

I'm pleased to announce that the current round of the Restore Grant has been expanded to include costs due to ice-storm related impacts. With this change, businesses can submit for operational expenses such as revenue loss, physical repairs, and inventory and equipment replacement due to storm damage. I want to recognize the team at Prosper Portland for their work to expand this program to assist small businesses. For details please visit portland.gov/rubio/news.

Congratulations to Dr. S. Renee Mitchell, who this week was presented with the 32nd Annual Steve Lowenstein Trust Award, which honors people who make an exemplary commitment to improving the quality of life for the most distressed and vulnerable populations in Portland. I've had the honor of knowing Dr. Mitchell for many years; for me and other young Black and Brown women starting their careers in Portland she was, and still is, the role model and mentor I aspired to be. As a creative revolutionist and freedom fighter, she continues to inspire me to be a better person and leader.

I was honored to join State Representatives Thuy Tran and Rob Nosse along with other enthusiastic art patrons for Oregon Ballet Theatre's magnificent and magical "Tinker Ball" gala Saturday at Portland Art Museum. Each year this essential event raises critical funds to provide world-class ballet performances, classical ballet instruction, and dance-focused community education programs across our region. Congrats to OBT!

This is unacceptable. We have to get creative and find a way to honor our commitment to this nationally recognized program instead of cutting it – and we need Portland Street Response in light of the recent settlement agreement with @thejusticedept. No going back.

Great job for calling to cover @commissioner.rene.gonzalez 's irresponsible proposal to cut PSR funding. The program should be expanded as promised, not undermined by its supervising Commissioner.

If it goes to the county it would most likely be contracted out so the program would shift and folks that work there would not be making the living ways they deserve. All folks working in this field should make a living wage or more.

Portland City Council today unanimously passed a pair of ordinances that I introduced to advance housing production despite ongoing challenges in the housing market. This legislation represents a meaningful step forward to show that Portland is serious about building more housing! The regulatory relief package makes strategic changes to zoning code to help reduce the cost of building housing in Portland. The legislation covers 15 issues that will help move the needle on housing production, including bike parking, ground floor active use/height, non-conforming upgrades, ecoroof standards, design review, and neighborhood contact. The other ordinance makes key changes to the Inclusionary Housing program, which was designed to create sustainable mixed-income communities by requiring affordable housing to be included in new developments. These changes will balance the program by offering a deeper property tax exemption for projects located in certain areas outside of Central City, as well as providing more flexibility and clarity for how the program functions. Changing development rules is not easy business, and I'm proud of the end result, which will spur housing production without sacrificing environmental sustainability.

Fentanyl is cheaper, more potent, and more accessible than ever – and it is profoundly impacting our Central City. The drug is killing Portlanders at historic rates – greater than gun violence – and those losses reverberate among those left living. Today I was pleased to see Mayor Wheeler joining forces with Oregon Governor Tina Kotek and Multnomah County Chair Jessica Vega Pederson to declare a 90-day state of emergency to address this public health and public safety crisis. By coordinating strategies and response efforts, this unified response will be able to use data to identify and respond to acute needs and gaps in service, identify any needed resources, and establish a long-term coordination system.

But freezing temperatures weren't a good enough reason to act on an emergency. It WAS an emergency. Portland cops are catching smugglers at the airport, remind me again what we're not doing? Better not be taking more taxpayer money for the police. best be sure that goes towards real, effective human services and not things like surveys to find out that, 'wow, Portland is not doing a good job taking care of its most at risk residents,' as if we didn't already know that.

Last weekend I joined community members and others who serve on city police oversight boards to attend Community Academy, a daylong training where the Portland Police Bureau's training division shared materials, conducted scenarios, and listened to community feedback. My staff and I were partnered with Officers Natasha Haunsperger and Michelle Petty. Dialogue that leads to stronger connections between community and our police officers is how we can shape a future Portland where everyone feels safe.

You know what's unsafe, zenith expansion, commenting again bc I'm being ignored, kind of how people felt when the back room deal was done. Not here to troll, this is literally the only issue keeping me from voting Rubio for mayor & I don't know how else to reach out. In both local and national politics I've seen the environment totally ignored, and this in the wake of devastation caused by climate driven storms? We're missing the big picture.

Today I had a productive meeting with Nicole Davison León, who was recently appointed as Executive Director of the Portland Hispanic Metropolitan Chamber of Commerce as it prepares for a 30th anniversary celebration next year. I'm excited that she is bringing a spirit of innovation and reflection to the chamber, which assists with economic advancement, wealth creation, and equity for the Latine community in Oregon and Southwest Washington.

Will you also remain silent about what is happening at the Texas boarder? This is no different from what the Palastinian people are experiencing from Israel. Colonial Projects are kill us.

The past few years have been difficult for downtown Portland, but through recovery efforts and innovative new projects, we are making the Central City a destination that everyone is inspired to visit, explore, and support. Last week I joined Mayor Wheeler for a one-of-a-kind interview with OPB's Weekend Edition – while skating the Portland Winter Ice Rink! This amazing attraction is adding weekly movie nights and dance nights through the end of the month, so now is the time to check it out if you haven't already. Remember: If you shop or dine in the Central City, just bring your receipt to the rink for a $5 skate ticket discount!

You have to call for an immediate and permanent ceasefire in Palestine. We as a nation should condemn genocidal actions, not aid those who cause it. The government has to reflect the voice of the people. I need you to call for a ceasefire and to support sending immediate humanitarian aid to the people of Palestine. Stop sending military aid to Israel, stop supporting genocide. Stop the occupation of Palestine and sever ties with sister city Ashkelon. I and millions of other Americans support the people of Palestine and Palestinian Americans. You need to show solidarity with us and use your position of power to do what you can to end this, now.

Yesterday I celebrated the grand reopening of the Oregon Entrepreneurs Network office, which shares space with the Portland Metro Chamber, Downtown Portland Clean & Safe, Partners in Diversity, United for Portland, and the Small Business Development Center. Portland wouldn't be the same without our innovative entrepreneurs and makers who are committed to growing and scaling up their businesses!

I am thrilled that Helmi Hisserich is bringing her years of expertise to the Portland Housing Bureau as its next director. We are still in a housing crisis amid uncertain market conditions, but the City must continue to set ambitious goals and meet these challenges with the urgency they demand. Hisserich is a forward-thinking housing leader who has worked with a wide range of civic, community, and elected leaders to advance solutions to the affordable housing and homeless crisis. During a 25-year career with the City of Los Angeles, she served as Deputy Mayor of Housing and Homelessness and as the director of Housing Development and Finance at the Los Angeles Housing Department, where she oversaw the implementation of more than 6,000 units of affordable housing. Since 2021 Hisserich has served as a director at the Global Policy Leadership Academy, an educational institution that prepares policy leaders to tackle complex societal challenges, where she has led U.S.-based housing policy makers to Austria to learn the Vienna Social Housing Model, a renowned example of how to provide high-quality and affordable housing for a large and diverse population. Hisserich earned a bachelor's degree in Comparative Literature from the University of Southern California and a master's degree from Cornell University with an emphasis in finance. She attended the Harvard Kennedy School Program for Senior Executives in State and Local government and was awarded a Stanton Fellowship in 2016 for thought leadership in housing. I want to thank Interim Housing Director Michael Buonocore for leading the bureau since September and for staying on board as Deputy Director through June. His experience and credibility in the housing and community sector have been essential during this leadership transition.

Yesterday I was thrilled to propose allocations for $540 million in unanticipated revenue from the Portland Clean Energy Community Benefits Fund (PCEF), which will provide some immediate budget relief and future protection for the City's General Fund, while also aligning with the community-driven values of PCEF. We are in a housing crisis and a climate crisis - and this revenue could not have come at a better time. PCEF is the first climate initiative led by communities of color in Oregon and the first program of its kind in the United States. It is designed to reduce and remove the systemic barriers that have accompanied our dependence on fossil fuels while centering frontline and BIPOC communities as decision-makers. With this revenue, we can now dream bigger about investments like these: • Building the most climate-friendly affordable housing at a time when more affordable housing investments are desperately needed. • Shifting the responsibility for the planting and maintenance of our 240,000 street trees away from homeowners and businesses and to the City. • Helping local industry reduce carbon emissions while growing their business, including local manufacturing, and the jobs that come with it.

Our central city is the economic engine, arts and cultural hub, and vibrant heart of our community. Despite ongoing challenges, downtown small-business leaders have made a commitment to Portland – and they continue to believe in our city's potential. This week I met with several of them to listen to concerns about crime, livability, public safety, and the business climate; we were joined by leaders from Prosper Portland and the Mayor's Office, who provided updates about the City's community safety and livability initiatives. Conversations like this are an important part of our work to show support for this community, build partnerships, and improve the effectiveness of our programs.

This weekend Prosper Portland's Film and Events Office is co-sponsoring a fun event to support local film and entertainment union members who have been affected by the historic Hollywood strikes that shut down the industry for more than 6 months. The Labor Market will feature live music, entertainment, raffles, special guest Mrs. Claus, and original works of art, handcrafts, and other creative products made by film workers – including treasures you may have seen in locally filmed TV shows and movies!

Yesterday I visited Adventist Health Portland to learn all about Project IMPACT (Improving Addiction Care Team), a national model for how to address the opioid and fentanyl addiction crisis. This innovative program brings together physicians, social workers, peer-recovery mentors, and community care providers to get to the root causes of substance use disorders right when patients are admitted to the hospital. Adventist Health is a vital community lifeline that offers other important services, including an Emergency Room, a new Intensive Care Unit, and a cutting-edge cardiology program.

Yesterday I spoke with KOIN-TV about an ordinance I plan on introducing early next year to address the health and environmental impacts of gas-powered leaf blowers on our residents and frontline workers. City bureaus have already transitioned to electric or battery-powered leaf blowers – and the next logical step is to introduce a citywide ban. The policy will provide ample time for outreach and engagement to minimize the impact on our landscaping community. In addition, I am committed to working with our county partners to ensure there is financial support to incentivize this transition.

“Next logical plan”. Battery powered anything is not free from environmental impacts. The next logical plan would be to set your priorities straight and make Portland more safe and livable for the taxpayers. As one of those tax payers who doesn’t like her inferior electric leaf blower, I can say that. Hear and listen to the tax payers.

This is why we need to show up and speak out against their weird thinking at city hall when it's on the agenda. She's so backwards and she has other agendas behind this. Keep giving us increases in our electric bills to pay for all their electric run battery operated at the expense of child labor in other countries. Stop with your abuse Rubio.

You Look super out of touch. No wonder you're worried about leaf blowers. You're helping your yuppie friends live a nice quiet life while everyone else has to deal with the crap decisions you make with our city. Go outside and smell the flowers. Or the poop and fentanyl on your streets. Why not try to ban those ? Or ban homeless people from from taking over the streets. You make Portland the laughing stock and embarrassment city of the country

This morning Portland passed a proclamation to honor Veterans Day, including veterans who make up almost 7% of the City workforce. Our veterans deserve the utmost respect and support every day – but particularly on Saturday's national day of recognition. Please show your support by attending the Portland Veterans Day Parade, which will kick off at 10am Saturday in Northeast Portland, followed by a Vendor Fair and Resource Fair. For details visit veteransdaypdx.org.

I recently spoke with KATU-TV about the urgent need to consolidate Portland's permitting services into a single office – something that has been discussed for decades but that has not moved forward until this summer, when City Council unanimously passed a resolution I introduced. As I told reporter Wright Gazaway: "When I talk to business owners, what they say time and time again is they want the process to be predictable, timely, and affordable. They're absolutely fair expectations. That is a level of service that we as a city should be providing our customers.... Everyone at different levels will feel the impact of a more streamlined service and more integrated service.... "We have decades upon decades – of culture, of relationships, of workplace systems – that have been built through this very careful network among multiple bureaus to get this done. So, the culture shift is going to be a big thing, and we're not underestimating that. That's why our employees are so valuable and key to being a part of how this gets facilitated over that time." Check out the full segment at katu.com/news/katu-investigates.

This morning I joined COR Disposal and Recycling, Portland General Electric, and climate leaders in celebrating Oregon's first 100% electric garbage truck! This unique vehicle will reduce carbon emissions from the transportation sector, which is one of the highest producers of greenhouse gas emissions here in Portland. But it is also an example of how we can have community benefits, climate benefits, and economic prosperity all at the same time. By maintaining our spirit of innovation in the fight for climate justice, we are creating a healthier Portland, while setting an example for others around the nation and the world to follow. The Rose City continues to lead the way in showing that we can build a better tomorrow without sacrificing economic prosperity or community well-being.

This morning Portland City Council proclaimed October to be National Disability Employment Awareness Month. People with disabilities have long strengthened and contributed to our economy, our culture, and our workplaces. And now more than ever, it is critical that employers in both the public and private sectors commit to effective disability inclusion and consistent reinforcement of that commitment to employees. Disability justice means creating conditions where employees with disabilities are able to be their full selves and have the environment to contribute equally.

Today I was overjoyed to congratulate the Children's Institute – led by the incomparable CEO Kali Thorne Ladd – at its 20th Anniversary Champions for Children Luncheon. The event celebrated and honored the past two decades of progress in early learning and care programs and shared a collective vision for the future of our young children and their families in Oregon.

Earlier this month Portland City Council proclaimed October as #BreastCancerAwarenessMonth, which aims to educate people about a leading cause of death for women in the United States while honoring the lives lost to this disease and recognizing the many survivors and their loved ones. As the proclamation makes clear, there are still too many health disparities among underserved communities by income, geography, insurance, race, ethnicity, age, and gender who are disproportionately affected by this disease. This month is an opportunity to unite the community and spread important messages of early detection, screening, and prevention to increase health equity, reduce the number of new diagnoses, increase survivorship, and improve everyone's quality of life.

Portland City Council today proclaimed October to be Filipino-American History Month in recognition of the 436th anniversary of the earliest documented proof of Filipino presence on the West Coast. This is a time for celebration, remembrance, reflection, motivation – and for all of our citizens to learn and appreciate more about Filipino-Americans and their historic contributions to our nation and to Oregon.
