

Whereas

Whereas, Portland is a platinum bicycle-friendly city; and

Whereas, bicycle transportation has been one of the leading motivations to get Portland commuters out of their cars, lowering single-commuter trips from 64% to 57% since 2000; and

Whereas, Portland students bike to school at eight times the national average; and

Whereas, through Sunday Parkways, the Portland Bureau of Transportation seeks to cultivate a community through the use of our city's largest public space to give every Portlander the opportunity to lead an active lifestyle, regardless of age, income, ability or geographic location; and

Whereas, on May 10th, 2015, the Bureau of Transportation is hosting the first of five Sunday Parkways events of the year, presented by Kaiser Permanente; and

Whereas, last year, 108,900 Portland residents and visitors participated in Sunday Parkways; and

Whereas, the fast-approaching summer weather is the perfect time for Portlanders of all ages to ride, roll and stroll through our neighborhoods;

Now, therefore, I, Charlie Hales, Mayor of the City of Portland, Oregon, the "City of Roses," do hereby proclaim the week of May 10 – 16, 2015 to be

Active Transportation Week

in Portland, and encourage all residents to observe this week.
