Jeffrey Cordial – Jeffrey has spent the last 9 years of his career learning the ins and outs of sustainable building, technology, and green energy production. Jeffrey has been heavily involved in the Solar and Green Energy Industry in Portland, through his role as Pac Northwest District Manager for CED Greentech, and as a business member of both the US Green Building Council and the Oregon Solar Energy Industry Association.

Statement from Jeffrey Cordial: In the city that I call home, and the place I plan to raise my children one day, sustainability is of the utmost importance. In coordinating a city plan consideration of all factors in sustainability: equality, lifestyle, education, growth, energy production, and transportation, all must be delicately balanced to preserve a pristine quality of life for many generations of Portlanders to enjoy.

Aron Faegre - Aron has 35 years of experience in architecture and engineering and has worked on many innovative projects. He is the principal of his own firm, working in Oregon, California, Washington, British Columbia, and many other locations. He is a physicist, architect, civil engineer and landscape architect who specializes in work requiring sensitive cooperation between citizen groups, public agencies, and the business community, with a particular interest in public and community facilities.

Statement from Aron Faegre: I want to promote Oregon and Portland as an innovation leader in the building industries.

Joshua Klyber - Joshua has over 6 years of code consulting experience in Portland and other jurisdictions, and 10 years' experience in residential remodeling. These teams run the gamut from residential owners to design teams of multi-national corporations, are based in the US, China, Bangladesh, Canada, Guyana, and other countries.

Statement from Joshua Klyber: I am interested in helping sustainable technologies become legal through the Portland Code Appeal Process.

David Posada – David has over 13 years' experience providing expertise on energy efficiency and sustainability strategies for leading architectural firms. David was the co-designer of the first Portland Metro Habitat for Humanity houses to achieve LEED certification. He served as Passive House consultant for one of the first certified multi-family passive house projects in the US.

Statement from David Posada: Given the many stakeholders, real concerns for public health and safety, and the administrative and political complexity of developing building codes and standards, it's no surprise that some higher performing systems and strategies can languish in limbo. As much as I want to see our city and region be leaders in promoting more sustainable practices and innovations, I want to contribute my experience and perspectives to help up get it right the first time.

Bob Sweeney – Bob has over 40 years of experience in Public Health and Environmental Protection, with emphasis on Onsite Wastewater Treatment Regulation, Siting, Design, Inspections, Troubleshooting and Training. He has extensive experience reviewing, approving, and applying for approval of innovative technology.

Statement from Bob Sweeney: I am looking forward to sharing my professional expertise with other professionals and learning about appropriate and effective uses of innovative technology.

Respectfully submitted,

Ted Wheeler
Mayor
