

KC Lewis

Bio:

KC Lewis has lived in Oregon since 2006, when he moved here to study at Reed College. He is an attorney who has worked in the criminal justice system, as a policy advocate, and as a disability rights attorney. He is also a person living with mental illness, and serves as a member of the Mental Health Alliance fighting for the rights of people living with mental illness throughout Oregon.

Statement of Interest:

As someone who has both worked as a criminal prosecutor and as an advocate for people with disabilities caught up in the criminal justice system, KC hopes to help build a system of true accountability that can create trust between the criminal justice system and the community in order to make us all safer.
