

Moving visitors provide shadows around exhibits in Forestry Building, 1905. It was an "interesting sight" to Oelo McClay. Pine cones hang in loops at far end. The panther mentioned is hidden behind larger deer in front (see p. 55). (OHS Collections.)

POST-EXPOSITION ATTENDANCE, 8826.

The attendance at the Lewis and Clark Exposition yesterday, as registered by the turnstiles, was 8826. This will be included in the grand total of attendance of the Fair, as the Exposition was advertised to remain open from June 1 to October 15. Yesterday, nevertheless, was the first day of the post-Exposition period. Including yesterday the total attendance of the Lewis and Clark Exposition is 2,554,335. The official figures, which will be given out today, may vary a little from these, but the difference will be very slight.

It hardly seems possible, but nevertheless it is true, that the Lewis and Clark Exposition is over. It hardly seems possible that never again will the Dream City be filled with the thousands of appreciative visitors, but already the Post-Exposition period has begun, and one day of it has been passed. While some might state that the Fair was open yesterday, as it was advertised to be open from June 1 to October 15, the Exposition officially and formally closed just upon the ebbing away of the last moments of Saturday night, and one minute after midnight marked the beginning of the Post-Exposition period. However, it is understood that the attendance yesterday will be included in the grand total of admissions for the Exposition, as it was not advertised to close until October 15.

Thousands Flock to Grounds.

Although Saturday was the second biggest day, the customary reaction was hardly noticeable and thousands of persons flocked through the gates to again look upon the Exposition in its entirety for the last time. The Art Gallery, the California building, and several of the Trail attractions were open, but the doors were locked upon all the other buildings. Notwithstanding, the Exposition looked more beautiful than ever, and those who attended the Fair yesterday will never forget the sight of the tall, magnificent buildings reposing in all their grandeur and sublimity, apparently gazing for last time upon the verdure-clad hills and distant snow-capped mountains, just before tottering over and into the abyss of ruin and destruction.

Even the elements, which for the last several weeks have acted as though they cherished an ill feeling toward the Dream City, were evidently moved by the sight of the magnificent palaces and beautiful parks and lawns trembling on the last thin line, and allowed the sun to shine down upon the Exposition in all its brilliancy. There was no gaiety nor mirth at the Exposition yesterday, but everyone seemed imbued to overflowing with enthusiasm; of the kind that sends tears to the eyes, and makes one appreciate a great thing as never before just as it is about to pass into oblivion.

Band's Farewell Concert.

The farewell concert of the Ellery Royal Italian Band attracted an enormous crowd, but all during the afternoon the walks and streets were comfortably filled with people who slowly roamed from one part of the grounds to the other. One of the things that attracted attention was the large number of people who attended the Exposition yesterday unaccompanied, evidently desirous of being alone in their thoughts and contemplations when they paid their last visit to the grounds and buildings which they had learned to love so dearly. Most all visited Government Island yesterday, but the majority of them avoided the Trail, traversing the bridge to the one side, the noise of the spieler not being in accord with their idea of observing the last hours of a dying friend. Those who did pass through the Trail paid but very little attention to the barkers, and the shows did a very poor business. In credit to the concessionaires it might be well to state that they also are not utterly devoid of feeling, and the few that did open their shows gave benefit performances for the salaried employes, and not for the mere lust of gain.

Most Pathetic Incident.

The most pathetic incident of yesterday at the Exposition was just as the sun sank down over the hills and the shadows began to creep over the grounds. It grew darker and darker but no lights appeared, and the clusters of globes which line the thoroughfares and buildings emitted no signs of life, and the palaces of white loomed up in the gloom, dark and forbidding. Although they knew the lights had been extinguished for the last time Saturday night, the visitors could not help but wait for the appearance of the faint redness on the outlines on the buildings which formerly marked the beginning of the electrical illumination. They waited and waited until darkness enveloped and clothed the entire Exposition, and then with a sigh and shudder they forlornly and sadly, slowly passed out of the gates into the lighted streets, their hearts filled with sadness and their senses numbed by the cold and stern realization that the Fair was over.

Destruction Begins Today.

Early this morning the work of annihilation will begin when a force of men will attack the bandstand on Gray Boulevard, where the greatest musical organizations of the country have delighted tens of thousands of persons. Then will come the rustic Summer houses, and so on until the larger buildings are reached. The cement walks, the balustrades and statues and other decorations which so greatly add to the beauty of the Exposition, will be destroyed or removed immediately to give the workmen room in which to tear down the exhibit buildings.

The main exhibit buildings, which nearly all belong to the Oregon State Commission, will be disposed of to the highest bidders, as they are of some little value for the lumber and building material they contain. They will not be torn down for several weeks, so as to give the exhibitors time to remove their displays. The Government building will also probably be sold to the highest bidder, but will hardly bring more than $5000. The Tenth United States Infantry will remain at the Exposition until November 5, and by that time nearly all of the Government possessions will have been removed or have passed into other hands.

In practically every building at the Exposition work will start in packing and boxing the exhibits, and by tonight they will look as though they had been visited by a tornado which left the outside of the structures untouched. Several of the state buildings have been sold already, and as soon as the exhibits are removed will be torn down. The actual work of destroying the structures on the Trail will start shortly. In a few months all that will be left of the great Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition is the grand old Forestry building, which will always remain as a vivid reminder of the greatness of Portland's Fair.

RULES FOR POST-EXPOSITION PERIOD.

Commencing Monday morning, October 16, all Exposition passes or passes dated prior to October 16, with the exception of the president's special pass, known as the "A" pass, will have to be validated by this department before they will be received for admission.

In addition to validated passes, the official Lewis and Clark badge will be entitled to recognition at the gates in the same manner as during the Exposition period.

Workmen's weekly passes will be issued after Monday in the same manner as during the pre-Exposition period, but without badge.

Commutation tickets will be accepted during the post-Exposition period, which tickets will be treated as passes; therefore must only be taken at the pass gates.

Wagons with one driver will be permitted to enter the grounds at Twentysixth street and St. Helen's gates without pass. No carriages except the president's will be permitted to enter the grounds, except on presentation of carriage pass.

In the use of all these passes the same rigid rules as regards statistical checks, showing of passes, etc., will be enforced.

F. B. DAVISON,

Chief Department of Admissions.

TUERCK LEADS IN ART METAL WORK

EXHIBIT RECEIVING HIGHEST AWARD AT LEWIS AND CLARK EXPOSITION—A GOLD MEDAL.

It is a matter of gratification to the many friends of I. K. Tuerck, proprietor of the Portland Art Metal Works, at Ninth and Davis streets, that his exhibit at the Lewis and Clark Exposition received the highest award—a gold medal. And yet this recognition of Mr. Tuerck's work might have been expected, as for many years he has been a leader in the manufacture of metal goods in which the element of art is combined with utility. The products of his shop, which is equipped with every facility for turning out, in the highest style of the art, stair work, porte-cochere, elevator enclosures, grills, bank and office railings, fireplace fittings, chandeliers, mausoleum and monumental work, statues, signs, gates, fences, etc., are to be found in many of the best business blocks, public buildings and homes throughout the Pacific Northwest. In addition to possessing every equipment for turning out all kinds of brass, iron and steel work, structural work, roofs, fronts, vaults, patterns, etc., Mr. Tuerck's shop is also making a specialty of hammered leaf work and metal spinning.

The above cut gives but a faint idea of the character of Mr. Tuerck's work, an even better illustration being found in the fountain chandeliers which adorn the terraces and boulevards of the Exposition grounds. These chandeliers have elicited many favorable comments from Fair visitors, and added not a little to the artistic beauty of the Fair architecturally.

In the Portland Art Metal Works Portland has an industry of which any city might feel proud, and Mr. Tuerck is to be congratulated upon the recognition he received at the hands of the jury on awards.

Log Building To Get Light

Council Approves Centennial Idea

The Forestry Building, world's largest log cabin, will be floodlighted and equipped with guides for Centennial visitors this summer.

An estimated $3,500 will be put up by the City Council to carry out the project. The idea was suggested by the Gallery of Trees Committee.

Floodlights will be installed on a power pole across the street from the big log building on NW Upshur St. Costs will be $150 for installation and $60 a month thereafter.

Guides to Be Hired

Three guides will be hired to take visitors through the building on a seven-day basis. This cost is estimated to run from $2,083 to $2,486.

In addition, a retired logger may be retained to answer questions and explain the function of the heavy logging machinery on exhibition outside the building.

If girl guides are used, City Commissioner Ormond R. Bean suggested they be outfitted in gingham and calico pioneer costumes.
