This week Portland City Council proclaimed September 15 to October 15, 2023, to be #LatinxHeritageMonth. I want to acknowledge the community and civic leaders in the Latinx community who are working hard to create opportunity, support higher education, and prepare emerging leaders to achieve their dreams and make their own unique contributions to our city and our economy - while building generation wealth for their families. Representation matters. And I am so proud to see this work alive and under way in our city.

Last weekend my family ventured to the Willamette Valley to attend the wrap party for Hunter Noack's exciting project "In a Landscape: Classical Music in the Wild," which concluded with an old-fashioned barn dance at Oakmead Farm near Newberg. What a fun celebration of our regional artists!

Tonight I'm honored to help kick off the 2023 Portland Latin American Film Festival, which runs through December 7th at The Hollywood Theatre. "Over There, Love Is a Destiny (Allá, Cartas al Corazón)" director Montserrat Larqué will be in attendance to introduce her film and to participate in a Q&A session after the screening. This event coincides with Latinx Heritage Month, a time for taking pride in our diverse cultures while working to ensure our communities are seen, thriving, and engaged. For tickets please visit pdxlaff.org.

Last week I welcomed Portland State University President Dr. Ann Cudd to the Rose City; she recently relocated after serving as Provost and Senior Vice Chancellor at University of Pittsburgh since 2018. We had a productive conversation about how we can partner strategically to revitalize the central city, increase access to affordable housing, and expand opportunities for BIPOC students.

This week I welcomed local entrepreneurs to the first meeting of the Advance Portland Advisory Committee, which is helping to create a road map toward inclusive economic growth and innovation. Their invaluable input will move us forward on multiple levels: ensuring Portlanders have access to high-quality, future-ready jobs; fostering equitable wealth creation; and creating healthy neighborhoods, including a vibrant, active Central City.

I'm immensely proud of my mother, Maria Caballero Rubio, who accepted an award last night from the Mexican consulate for her leadership at Centro Cultural de Washington County. The presentation took place at El Grito Portland, a community-centered event highlighting the traditions of Latine culture, which continues through today at Moda Center. Congratulations to Victoria Lara of Lara Media for creating this amazing event for our community. #elgrito #latinpdx #latine

Repost from Portland Office of Equity and Human Rights: ¡Celebremos! As we join in celebration of Latinx Heritage Month, we honor the myriad contributions of our Latinx, Latino, Latina, Chicano, Chicana, and Hispanic family, friends, colleagues, and neighbors. Their unique and varied dialects, cultures, and customs enrich our community experience. We hold up the resilience and strength of the multiple cultures whose roots come from Latin American countries and combine with Afro-Latino and Indigenous lineage.

Thank you, KOIN News, for inviting me on this week's edition of "Eye on NW Politics" to discuss long-needed permitting reforms that will help catalyze housing production in Portland. As I told Brandon Thompson: "We're in a housing crisis, and we're still in an economic recovery coming out of the pandemic. What we need right now is an all-hands-on-deck approach.... You need that central point of authority to sometimes make the call that is critical to moving a project through, or to resolving or untangling a conflict." Watch the full interview at KOIN.com/NWPolitics.

Yesterday I joined a community kickoff for the new Sustainability and Climate Commission, which will continue Portland's legacy of climate leadership. Nearly every day we see proof that we are living in a climate emergency, so it has become critical to invest targeted resources into climate action and to ensure that city government changes its culture to one that always considers the climate impacts of our projects, programs, and policies. Ultimately, the commission will serve as the key accountability body for all sustainability and climate city business, bridging bridge the policy work of boards, commissions, elected officials, staff, and the community. With the public's continued engagement and support, it will ensure that matters of climate and sustainability are treated with the urgency and importance we all need. For more information visit portland.gov/bps/scc.

I appreciate the difficulty of having to balance long term improvements with short term emergencies, but the crises immediately in front of us far outweigh these long term initiatives. Crime, homelessness, addiction, dysfunctional City operations need your full attention right now. In my opinion, population growth means that the impact on our planet simply from overpopulation means that whatever you do to slow our contribution to climate change will never be significant.

The construction industry is pivotal in this era of rebuilding and recovering from the economic downturn; it helps to bring to life all that communities envision for our cities, neighborhoods, parks, and downtowns. This morning I was proud to speak at the National Association of Women in Construction Annual Conference and to thank them for leading the way in setting a new standard for excellence, opportunity, fairness, equity, and inclusion.

Yesterday I welcomed attendees of #PortlandSneakerWeek, a festival of sneaker-themed experiences to connect athletes, collectors, aspiring footwear professionals, and industry influencers. They convened an inspiring discussion titled "Leading the Way: Highlighting Innovation Through Product, Process and Education," which showcased the best work driving change within the Athletic and Outdoor industry.

I had a great time yesterday at the Laurelhurst Neighborhood Picnic, which was part of #NationalNightOut, an annual event to build positive relationships among neighbors and drive community engagement.

I'm excited to welcome the newest member of our team, External Affairs Manager Byron Beck! Byron is a longtime Portland journalist and social media specialist who contributes to both local and national publications as well as to radio and television. He is deeply connected to multiple communities across Oregon, including entertainers, entrepreneurs, restaurateurs, political leaders, media executives, and civil rights groups. As a journalist, Byron has won multiple awards from the Association of Alternative Newsweeklies and the Society of Professional Journalists. From 2001 to 2008, Byron authored Willamette Week's "Queer Window" column. He and his partner, Juan Martinez, were plaintiffs in Martinez v. Kulongoski, the lawsuit challenging Measure 36's inclusion on the 2004 ballot. Byron enjoys photography, pop culture, and traveling, especially to Paris.

This week I joined Congressman Earl Blumenauer to celebrate the addition of the Jim Pepper House to the National Register of Historic Places. An innovator of both jazz-rock fusion and world music who died in 1992, Pepper is internationally renowned for his compositions melding popular jazz music with rock, folk, and especially traditional Native American music. The house is only the third property in East Portland to receive National Register designation and one of the first properties in the Pacific Northwest to be listed specifically for contemporary Indigenous history.

On Friday I joined Congresswoman Suzanne Bonamici and thousands of sports fans for the Women's World Cup Watch Party! Even though we were nearly 7,000 miles away from where the game took place in New Zealand, it was amazing to experience the excitement together on the big screen. Big thanks to The Sports Bra, Portland Community Football Club, Portland Events and Film, and all the small businesses and volunteers who helped make this exciting event happen!
