Portlanders have told us clearly and repeatedly that they want us to address the housing crisis – we desperately need more housing generally, and more diverse and affordable housing options specifically. Let's keep up this successful momentum! koin.com/

I join these students in their demand for urgent action to address the gun violence epidemic. We need to renew the national ban on assault weapons, and we need to close loopholes that allow criminals to access deadly firearms.

Despite this act's passage, the impacts of systemic discrimination and exclusion have continued to affect our communities for generations. Local data continue to show higher cost burdens, higher risks of displacement, and differential treatment for certain communities.

Neighborhoods facing higher rates of eviction are the same neighborhoods that our communities of color historically reside in. Portland must continue to further fair housing, remove barriers, create vibrant and accessible communities, and ensure all Portlanders have opportunity.

1968's Fair Housing Act addressed the injustices that were embedded into our society through housing discrimination. The government, industry, and society were complicit in creating policies that excluded communities of color from opportunities to access safe housing.

While we grapple with the pandemic, an affordable housing shortage, and a market that continues to leave nearly half of all renters cost-burdened, we're facing a "perfect storm" of market conditions that make housing less affordable, including rising inflation and interest rates.
