Cooling Portland installs cooling units for people with low incomes who live in the city of Portland. The program prioritizes those most vulnerable to the impacts of heat, particularly people who are older than 60, have medical conditions, and live alone.

Cooling Portland helps prepare for the impacts of climate change, especially as we see continued hotter temperatures. These cooling units help keep people safe & comfortable during the hot months, & the heat pump equipment also provides supplemental heating in the cooler months.

Juneteenth, which will be formally observed on June 19th, is an important day of reflection – but it also must be a day to commit to tangible action. And it starts with us here at the City – valuing and seeing Black employees and recognizing their experiences and contributions.

This violence should NOT be normalized – and we cannot become numb. Our values and our conscience demand that we take action – which starts with facts, education, and listening to Indigenous voices. We all have a responsibility to be informed and activated about this horror.

Blackfish has always been on the cutting edge of the Pacific Northwest art scene. In fact, it was one of the first galleries to establish itself in the Pearl District, which is now home to so many artistic endeavors and considered one of this city's first arts and culture hubs.

The great need for more housing, at all income levels, is what prompted me to call the question and deliver a better way of serving those who literally build and shape Portland every day. <https://t.co/FvZgtBBr2S>

By bringing all of our development permits under one authority, we can reduce the cost and time it takes to get a project done. That's good for Portlanders - and the economy.

Yesterday I was honored to congratulate several new officers at their swearing-in ceremony. With their service, we are continuing to build a 21st century Portland Police Bureau that puts community safety at the center. <https://t.co/4j5jgZkVw9>

I'm committed to ensuring that the bureau has the tools and infrastructure support it needs to recruit, hire, and retain police officers. Filling all vacancies is critical to maintaining its service levels.

This morning I spoke with @Univision about a heartbreaking situation involving asylum seekers who are struggling to find lodging here. It's unacceptable that these families had to navigate this on their own, and I want to thank the organizations that stepped in to fill this void. <https://t.co/rRqKb7SvnT>

My office has met with the Interfaith Movement for Immigrant Justice to find out how we can help. I'm relieved to know that County funding will extend their lodging through April and that the State Office of Immigrant and Refugee Advancement is working on a long-term solution.

Last weekend it was wonderful to gather with Filipino-American community leaders - along with allies like former Mayor Tom Potter - to help kick off Filipino Food Month while celebrating the Oregon premiere of the film "When I Met You in Tokyo." <https://t.co/877910njMR>

The Filipino community's genuine warmth, love, and deep sense of family is a testament to the heart that beats strongly in this culture - and it helps make Portland more vibrant, more inclusive, and more alive.
