Per our state zoning laws, any recommended changes would then be evaluated by the Planning Commission, and then go to Council for final approval. While the timing is dependent on several internal and external factors, my goal is to see the code changes happen as soon as possible.

Fentanyl is cheaper, more potent, and more accessible than ever – and it is profoundly impacting our Central City. The drug is killing Portlanders at historic rates – greater than gun violence – and those losses reverberate among those left living.
