This essential program empowers girls, women, communities of color, and others with physical self-defense skills in addition to understanding different escape options, negotiating consent, learning about abusive relationships, setting boundaries, and demonstrating assertiveness.

We continue to see data highlighting higher cost burdens, higher risks of displacement, & differential treatment for certain communities within our city. We hear stories of disabled seniors unable to find housing & families being displaced from their traditional neighborhoods.

Community is what drives change. Women's History Month gives us all a moment to recognize the women who have inspired all of us – in big and little ways – and to thank them.

It's why this past January I suggested to the Mayor, & then we discussed at a subsequent Council meeting, a recalibration that includes all active system partners. We need to find a new, balanced way forward that is humane, especially for our community members with disabilities.

Back then I said that to move the policy forward before all these pieces are ready to go does not make good or responsible policy sense to me. As you might remember, I introduced amendments to the ordinance, and ultimately voted no. <https://t.co/oqZSIEQLBQ>

As I stated then, and is worth repeating, I believe it is important to have a process that is inclusive of all the system partners - including shelters, law enforcement, experts, and others - to arrive at a solution that is inclusive and not divisive.

Yesterday the OR Supreme Court decided it would not weigh in on a MultCo judge's injunction on the City camping ban. This is why I warned that we needed to first ensure our timelines matched with adequate shelter capacity, as well as a clear & defined shelter & housing strategy.

Our state partners rightly understand that ambitious housing production goals cannot be achieved without a significant investment in the water, sewer and transportation infrastructure that make housing possible. Thank you for your leadership! <https://t.co/UZylw6RUWh>

Portland is on an upward trajectory, and we are leading the industry in sustainable manufacturing practices. This week I had the opportunity to meet Elias Stahl and the crew at Hilos, along with representatives from University of Oregon, NTX, and Portland Sneaker Week.

These folks are working to reimagine Old Town, and showing off the power of sustainable practices to potential partners. Thanks to Prosper Portland and Portland Athletic & Outdoor for helping pull the pieces together!

I applaud @multco and very much support all that they stated in this resolution. I will be speaking with my Council colleagues about how we best can share our collective thoughts with our congressional delegation so that they know exactly where we stand. <https://t.co/dm2FNppMSx>

Last week I had a great chat with "Portland Tea Party" about how the City is working to revitalize our Central City through programs like the Downtown Business Incentive Credit and through activation events led by Portland's creative community: <https://t.co/fzTAQi8TWB>
